IT'S NOW officially Clint Eastwood, mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Eastwood, the world-famous actor, was sworn in as mayor on a cold rainy April 15th before his family, friends and the media. Another several hundred fans crowded against the police barricade outside city hall trying to catch a glimpse of the star. Eastwood presided over the shortest council meeting on record — about seven minutes. He did take time to present outgoing Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilmen Robert Stephenson and David Maradei with potted cypress tree seedlings that "represent the future." For more pictures, please see pages three and five. (Photo by Paul Sakuma, courtesy of Associated Press.)

Now it's time to get down to some business

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(Analysis)

NOW THAT the party is over, it's time to go to work.

There is little time for a honeymoon to be afforded to new Mayor Clint Eastwood and his council: just-elected Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer and holdovers James Wright and Helen Arnold.

Sworn in on a rainy Tuesday afternoon, tax day April 15th, the new council majority that swept into office by a landslide now faces a mountain of issues ranging from parking to a Harrison Memorial Library annex to ice cream cones to advisory committee appointments.

Just about each issue has a history of complexity and controversy that will defy quick solutions promised by easy campaign rhetoric.

Answers will not be as numerous as the questions.

The council will be offered its first peek at the issues, policies and priorities of the city during a special study session still to be scheduled, but expected by the end of this month. (Its first regularly-scheduled official meeting is not until May 6.)

What must the council confront? How will these issues be handled? And who will the players be?

Those are the questions explored by the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook in talks this past week with Eastwood advisors, current city officials and residents.

It is no secret that the just-ousted city council considered the planning commission its number one liability. And it also is no secret that the new three-member council majority would not be the least bit upset if several planning commissioners now chose to resign.

There have been several instances of shortness with the public and ill-advised remarks; John Logan's comment about too much glass in Eastwood's building and a ribald remark that followed it, immediately come to mind.

It was the planning commission that embarrassed the city with its proposed ban of ice cream cones, even though the council mistakenly failed to immediately disavow itself and actually magnified the controversy by furthering the debate.

According to City Atty. Don Freeman, the council has the authority to ask for the resignations or remove advisory board members at any time even though there are fixed terms of office.

"All boards and commissions (the library board is the only exception) serve at the pleasure of the city council...In reality the council can ask a board or commission member to resign or they could remove them," Freeman said.

Stop library annex

Dear Editor:

Carmel does not need a $600,000 childrens library. We do need a decent adult reading room. A new projected wing addition on the present library would add as much usable space at much less cost.

The new addition on our Harrison Memorial Library would be in the same design as the Maybeck architecture and would still leave a large amount of landscaped area.

The new addition would have a grand reading room on the main level with a fireplace and comfortable seating. This would be in keeping with a heavily used adult library. The lower floor extending from the present childrens area would have patrons restrooms, administrative offices and storage.

Surface parking with proper landscaping can be provided on the annex lots for less than $50,000. The underground parking proposed will cost $400,000.

The split of the library is not constructive:

1. Carmel needs more adult space. There are 10 or more adults for every one child that use our library.

2. Wasted Money — annex cost of $600,000 is too expensive when we can add a wing to the present library with as much effective usable space for less than $400,000.

3. Annex Costs More to Maintain — additional personnel will be needed for cleaning, staffing and maintenance cost will be much higher than an addition on the present building.

The addition to our present library was presented in January by John Mitchell to the city council. The plan was turned down and the return to annex thinking was approved by a council that has since been shown to be radically out of step with our town. I wonder if our library board of trustees are not at least four years out of step with the needs of the adult population in Carmel.

If our new council members will please go into the library any afternoon and see the cramped seating of our citizens, I'm sure they will reverse their support for the current annex proposal. It is better to wait, than build an annex to the library that is not going to fill the needs of a heavily-adult Carmel population.

Workshop a success

Dear Editor:

The recent Holman Highway Task Force Public Workshop at the Monterey Bay Aquarium was an important step in building the partnership between public and private agencies and the residents of the Monterey Peninsula to initiate workable solutions to the traffic and safety problems of the Holman Highway.

The task force is to be congratulated for truly reaching out to the community in a sincere effort to include every interested individual and community group in the decision-making process.

The Carmel Pine Cone, along with other local media, is to be commended for the excellent news coverage which helped to make the workshop such a success.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium, and particularly Hank Armstrong, are due a very special thanks for donating the facility for the workshop and for the many hours of volunteer time spent in preparation for the event.

Finally, I'd like to personally thank the 150 people who contributed their time and energy, and thoughtful suggestions, to the workshop discussion groups.

And our volunteer discussion facilitators and recorders: Susan Cate Lynn, Neal Owen Kruse, River Gurtin, Roger Ward, Clare Bornstein, Ralph Bailey, Loren Barbieri, Ray Parks, Sandy Dupar, Ruth Vreeland, Candace Ingram and Mike McNally.

Shame on thee

Dear Editor:

I suspect that a great percent of the people who voted for Clint Eastwood stand to benefit monetarily from all the publicity before, during and after the election.

If and when I go to Carmel, and if I should chance to see the mayor, I hope he has a battered cowboy hat on, a cigar in his mouth and a dog tagging along so I'll recognize him. As for the voters who hope to benefit from this election, they'll be easy to spot, standing behind their busy cash registers, with a "star" in their eyes. Shame on thee, Carmel-by-the-Sea!

Mrs. Douglas Royal

Thanks, Tim Grady

Dear Editor:

Thank you Tim for standing up and speaking for the good of the land and the people.

And Carmel, oh Carmel. Take a chance, go for the dream; love your home and make it such as the world has never seen one made. Dare to be intelligent, alive, free and peaceful.

Dare to be secure so that hearts can once more be open to one another.

All the rest of the world will continue wrong without, perhaps, an example. Perhaps it is no mistake that it watches.

This is the power you possess and the gift you can be.

Preposterous marathon

Dear Editor:

The Big Sur marathon, scheduled for Sunday, April 27 on Highway 1 commencing at Big Sur with the finish line at Rio Road in Carmel has to be simply preposterous. How any group gained permission for this running is beyond comprehension.

Closing off this highway for six hours jeopardizes the safety of lives. Ambulances, police and fire vehicles will certainly be at a disadvantage in their pursuit of their assignments of saving a life or extinguishing a fire.

Consider the people living within the perimeter of the highway and desirous of driving to church, store, visiting or perhaps just to enjoy the Sunday with some form of sporting exercise. They are penalized to stay in their homes for the duration of the run.

Good judgment would insist the marathon be moved to another area where none of the above mentioned rights would come to fore. It is obvious that CalTrans must deny use of the highway basically because it has no alternate roads and therefore no way of entering or existing. It is a definite threat to the public and the runners.

Going on a honeymoon

Now THAT the courtship has ended and the marriage completed, is it time for the honeymoon?

Well we certainly hope so. The residents of Carmel have amply demonstrated that Clint Eastwood, Elinor (there, I spelled it right), and Francis P. "Bob" Fischer are the ones they want to see running their city government. Perhaps that is why the people so overwhelmingly voted in the threesome: they felt they were losing their say in city government, that government was running them and not vice versa.

But enough of that.

Time here to do a little housekeeping, catch up on some old news, offer a few apologies to people and events that may have not made it into our pages because of the election and even offer a few hints on how to get happily published in the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

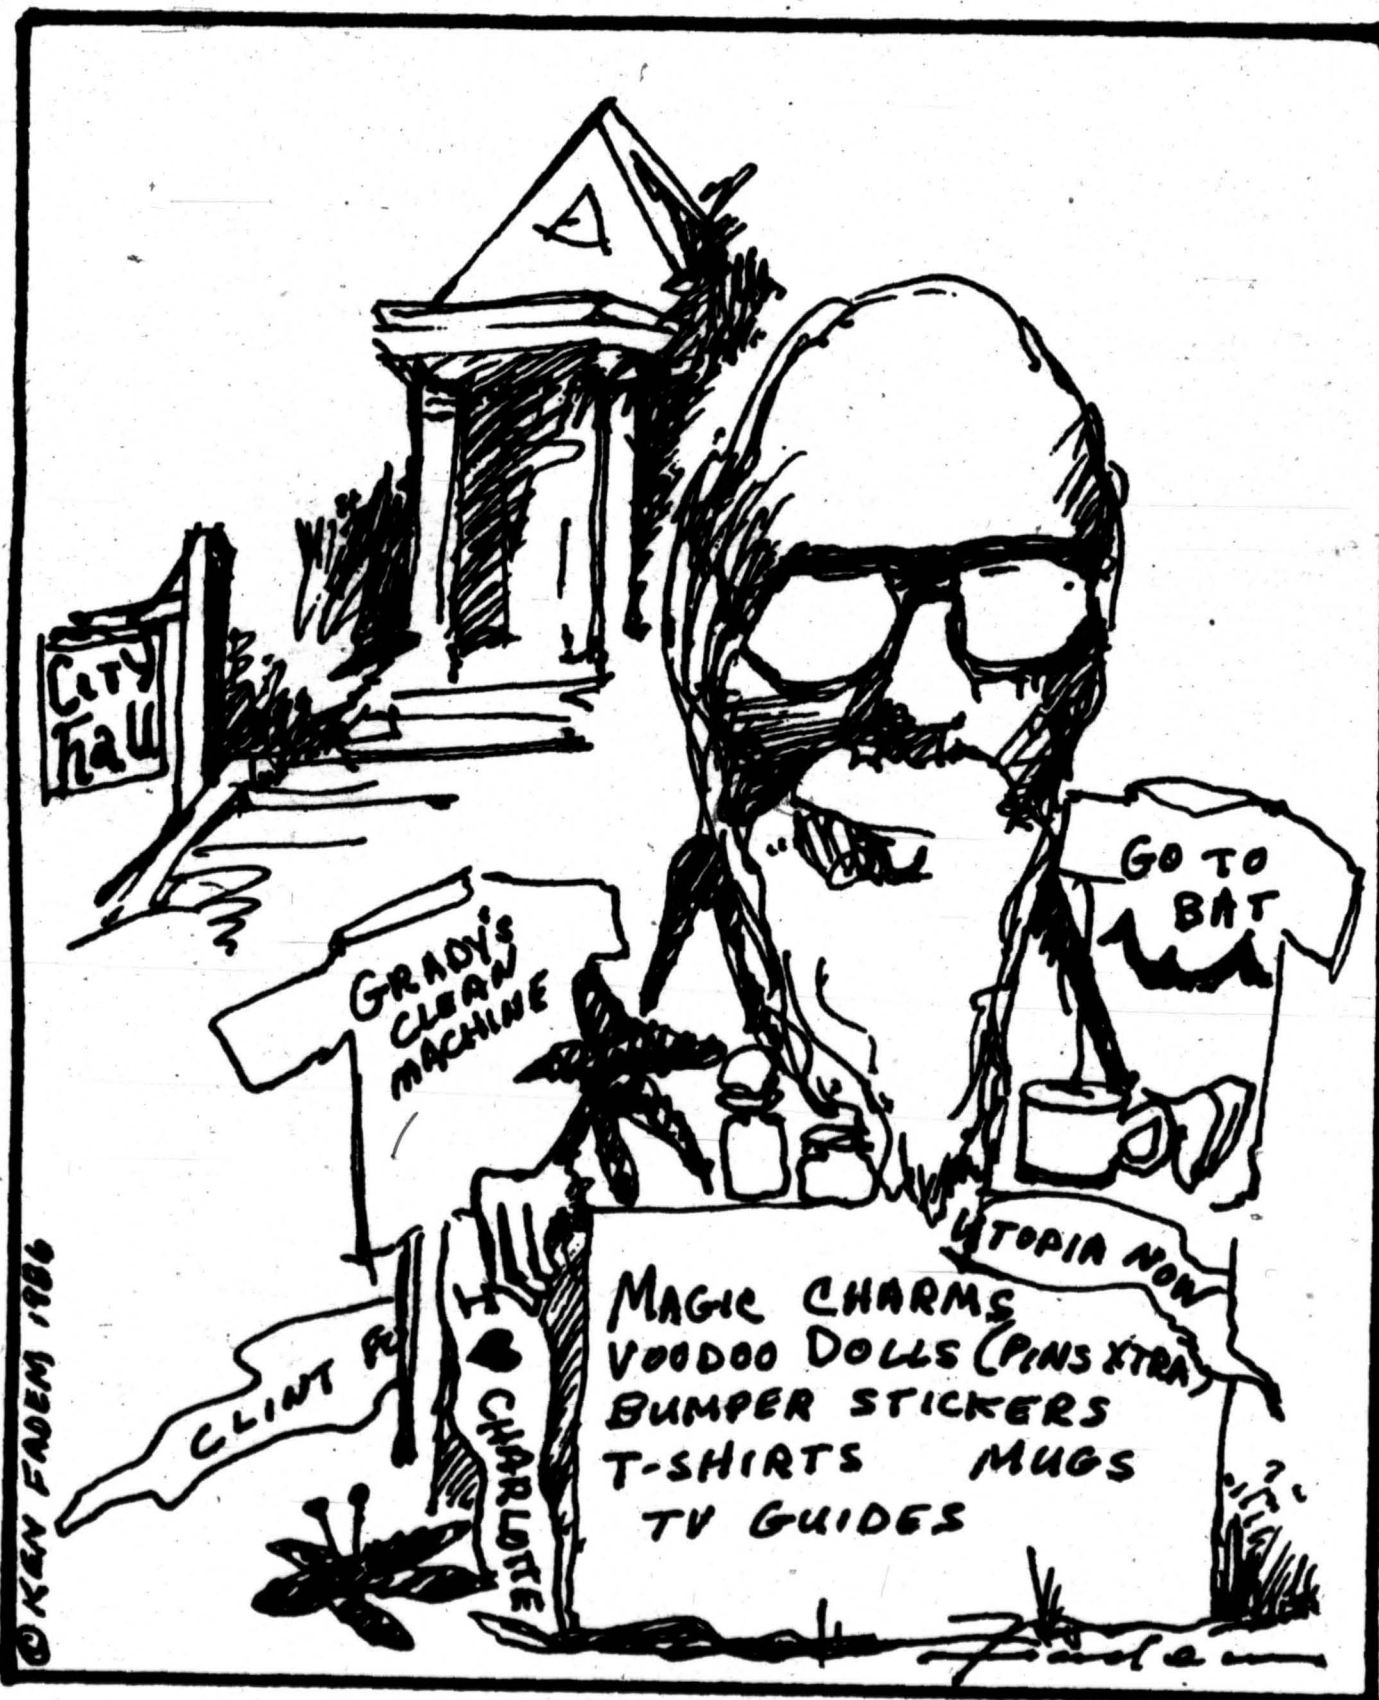

I hate to admit it but there have been a few news stories left "hanging on the hook" because of the election; a few stories that were overlooked, and even a few that had to be pulled at the last minute for one reason or another.

Now we can — like the new city council — get down to business and again start covering all the news and views of Carmel-by-the-Sea and its environs.

Yes, we still accept letters, although none about the election please, but make sure they're typewritten (or printed, our typesetters will scream in mortal terror otherwise), double-spaced (very important, that way I can go wild with my editorial pencil), signed (also important), and includes a phone number. Any of those items left out and we may have to leave your letter out.

About getting items into Pine Whispers. Make sure all the pertinent information is there: the who, what, where, why, and when, as well as a phone number of a contact person (this is very important because some of these releases are illegible). We do not accept releases over the phone, too many problems. Also, we do accept and occasionally run photographs submitted with releases (even color by golly), so break out those Brownies and Polaroids when you're at your next meeting or soiree.

Now about that honeymoon, forget about that for now, I want to go on a long vacation.

Now the real work begins for new city council

MOST LIKELY to be immediately replaced is Planning Commissioner Gene Hammond — and he knows it.

Asked of his chances for re-appointment when his term expires at the end of May, Hammond replied, "none, absolutely none."

Hammond did say that "I would certainly like to continue on the planning commission very much."

Commissioner Art Mertens' term also expires in May. "I'm going to apply so I hope I'll be accepted. I've had no talks with anybody. I would like to participate in this new era that is developing based on the policy statements made by Mr. Eastwood during his campaign. I'd like to be part of it."

Two other commissioners, who obviously disturbed Eastwood by publicly supporting the incumbent council and mayor, are Sandy Swain and Tom Nash. Their terms do not expire for quite a while.

"I will hang in there until death do us part or appointment she is up," said Swain, the veteran commissioner and former chairman. "If they suggest I resign they will hear a scream from here to eternity."

Nash added, "As far as I'm concerned, I have three years and I will serve out my term."

Asked about the fate of Hammond and Mertens, Nash said, "Oh sure, they'll both go."

Under the city charter, the mayor, in this case Eastwood, makes the appointments subject to the approval of the council.

The fate of other boards is much more murky since those commissions received little publicity during the campaign.

The library board is independent of the council once appointments are made and members cannot be removed at the whim of the council, according to Freeman.

The Business License and Code Review Board has tremendous power, but its membership has been completely reconstituted so it's unlikely wholesale changes will be made until the new board has had a chance to develop a philosophy in line with the new council.

The cultural commission and forestry commission generally are apolitical, although there are members on each board who supported the incumbent council. It's extremely doubtful that a purge on these less powerful commissions will be made just solely because some members supported the incumbents.

In addition to appointments, the council has direct authority over two employees: the city administrator and city attorney.

'I SERVE at the pleasure of the council. If they say don't come to work tomorrow I don't come to work tomorrow," Freeman said.

"But if I decide not to come to work tomorrow, I don't have to come to work tomorrow," he added.

Freeman added, "I'm looking forward to working with them. I think it will be exciting. I would like to think I can work with anyone."

It takes four votes to oust a city administrator, a position currently occupied by Schmitz.

The consistent criticism of Schmitz in Eastwood's camp is that Schmitz has too much power. A frequent complaint is that staff runs the city rather than the council.

But it's generally acknowledged that the three new board members have the political savvy to realize that the city administrator follows policies of the council.

New policies by this council will effect a change in city staff practices and it is doubtful any major changes will be made in the first months to give both the administration and the council an opportunity to feel each other out and see how they work together.

It also takes four votes to remove a city administrator and it is a near impossibility that incumbents Helen Arnold and James Wright would go along with any plan to have Schmitz removed.

Under the Carmel charter, the council also has no authority to hire or fire city employees, other than the city administrator and city attorney. Personnel is the responsibility of the city administrator.

It will be imperative that this council and staff work closely together for the pending issues are numerous, complex and controversial.

Following is an analysis of about a dozen of the key issues and projects that awaits the new council and a few guesses on what may happen based on campaign comments.

THE LIBRARY ANNEX

The question of how to provide more space for Harrison Memorial Library was probably being debated when Eastwood was a Ft. Ord soldier, more than a quarter of a century ago.

Plans are proceeding for an annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue and will be discussed by the planning commission April 30.

Look for the new council to rehash the issues of buying the adjoining buildings (Eastwood's preference), or expanding into the Ocean Avenue frontage (Laiolo's suggestion), or doing nothing at all (Fischer's position).

The library board cannot simply build the annex even though it has the cash on hand because the property is owned by the city.

THE CITY also is financing the underground parking facility.

But expect the council to at least explore the old idea of working in cooperation with the Pine Inn to build a larger parking facility using the hotel's property to the south.

This one is too close to call. The library board wants the annex while the council has as many opinions as members.

Eastwood did give library officials reason to hope that he'll support the annex when he said he would donate the Carmel stone from his Carmel Valley quarry.

But don't expect a quick solution unless there are position changes and a united front is put up to build an annex and parking facility as proposed by the library board.

PARKING AT SUNSET CENTER

There is no doubt that this project will be one of the first to break ground if it does not get tangled in the environmental impact report process. All three new council members have voiced strong support for the facility.

Discussion will focus on whether a private developer should be contracted to build the parking facility or if the city should enact a parking assessment district to finance the project.

The only snag could be money. The question the council needs to resolve is whether the cost is worth the approximately 150 spaces to be gained by a facility.

A park on top of the facility is probably the likely choice.

Don't expect much action on buying the Hodges property for a parking lot, the price is simply too high and the shuttle bus service a management problem the council probably does not want.

A remote possibility is contracting with the high school for parking in the summer months and then operating a shuttle service for that facility.

Look for the resident-only parking idea to be raised again, but only after additional parking is provided elsewhere for employees and visitors.

PUBLIC RESTROOMS

Credit must be given to the former council, which implemented the restrooms at Devendorf Park. Plans are being designed and expected construction this summer.

Piccadilly Park is a likely candidate for restrooms, according to this new council. Past councils rejected that idea for fear the park is too small.

Also, public restrooms in the Post Office parking lot is a possibility. The past council shelved that plan in favor of facilities at Devendorf Park.

EXPECT THE big restroom controversy to come when — and if — a proposal is made to provide bathrooms on the south end of Carmel Beach as part of the rehabilitation project.

BEACH WALKWAY

Hard to say which way this one will go. Wright and Arnold appear to support the plan. Fischer doesn't want any walkway for fear of the loss of parking spaces — 54 at last count.

Anticipate a walkway, but perhaps scaled in width and redesigned to minimize the loss of parking. Complaints by residents tired of fighting traffic, skateboards and bicycles while walking on Scenic Road will push this project through.

SENIOR HOUSING

The future of the Dolores Street senior citizen housing complex is good. What's not so good is the contract with the Monterey County Housing Authority.

The housing authority, which under the contract will build and maintain the facility while the city donated the land, received a bid of $844,750 for construction. Architect Jerry Takigawa estimated construction costs at $600,000.

Since the architect and bidder have met and concessions made to lower the price tag by about $100,000.

The housing authority will be meeting next week to determine whether it can cover the approximately $100,000 difference.

Eastwood, Laiolo and Fischer all have expressed concerns that the housing authority must open the complex to non-city residents. They also frown on the relatively small number of units.

Expect possible discussion on renegotiating or dropping the housing authority contract. If that happens, look for the city to increase density and work with the Carmel Foundation on operating the housing development.

MISSION RANCH

If the three-member council majority sticks to its campaign promise, any discussions on buying Mission Ranch will be during public session.

Although there is council disagreement on whether to buy Mission Ranch, the overwhelming public support for the purchase probably will convince members to vote for it if the asking price drops from its present $5.5 million.

Other joint venture plans with private individuals also are on the agenda. If those work out, look for the city to only keep the tennis courts and perhaps enough land for a swimming pool.

Doug Tuck, spokesman for Mission Ranch Corp., says he welcomes any initiation of talks between the property owners and the city.

ICE CREAM

The council's philosophy on takeout foods is expected to be tested almost immediately. And appropriately the challenge will come from ice cream cones.

IN THE works is a plan to open an ice cream store (cone takeout only) at a barber shop on San Carlos Street. If the planning commission holds true to past decisions, the application will be rejected.

An appeal probably will follow to the council where it will have to decide whether to honor the general plan policy banning takeout-only establishments.

Or, the council could delay action while the planning commission prepares a separate policy on ice cream parlors.

Look for the latter decision.

HOLMAN HIGHWAY TASK FORCE

Don't be surprised to see a motion to join the Holman Highway Task Force on the first agenda, May 6.

Eastwood has attended at least one meeting and all three new council members favor working with the task force on solving traffic problems on Holman Highway between Carmel and Pacific Grove.

The real rub will be whether the city representative lobbies against the recommendation to eliminate the new Holman Highway gate to Pebble Beach. Fears are that without a new gate traffic will increase through the Carmel entrance on North San Antonio Street.

Big Sur, Odello key issues facing supervisors

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE FUTURE of development in Big Sur is just one of several key land use issues that the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will address in the coming months.

Fresh from completing the decade-old Big Sur Land Use Plan, supervisors now must act on the implementing ordinances to back up by law the policies in the plan.

Also to be contended with is Republican Sen. Pete Wilson's proposed legislation to give the federal government a powerful voice in future development of Big Sur.

And Big Sur is not the only planning issue supervisors must confront. Still to come in the immediate future are:

- Completion of the Carmel Valley Master Plan and its accompanying environmental impact report.

- Residential development at Carmel Point and on Lobos Ridge with its sweeping northern views overlooking the mouth of Carmel Valley.

- Development at Mission Ranch, the Odello East artichoke fields and Point Lobos Ranch.

- Development of a senior citizen housing complex in the Valley on land donated by Carmel's new Mayor Clint Eastwood and fellow actor James Garner.

- A subdivision on the expansive Rancho San Carlos — once the development density issue is settled by the courts.

Supervisors are still celebrating this month's Coastal Commission certification of the Big Sur Land Use Plan (LUP) that ended a 10-year-old struggle to put together the policies that will govern development in one of the most scenic coastal regions in the world.

Supervisors, however, must now put together the implementing ordinances that will govern the LUP policies.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman plans to propose that the board adopt an emergency interim ordinance that will effectively give the county the legal authority to enforce the LUP policies.

FARM WORKER dumps out rejected artichokes from the Odello East ranch harvest.

What to do about development on the ranch is one of the sticky questions before supervisors in the coming months. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Big Sur residents as a taking of public lands without fair compensation.

While supervisors joust over the implementing ordinances, still looming on the horizon is Sen. Wilson's proposed legislation that would give the federal government a say in Big Sur development issues.

Supervisors, Rep. Leon Panetta and several Big Sur organizations have urged that

"I'm just too concerned that things will slip through the cracks," said Strasser Kauffman, who represents the Big Sur region.

The interim ordinance is necessary because Strasser Kauffman does not anticipate completion of the implementing ordinances until "at least summer."

And one of those ordinances — the transfer of density credit (TDC) policy — no doubt will be tied up in lengthy public hearings because of its controversial nature.

THE TDC policy basically grants property owners of land in the viewshed permission to use their development rights to build extra units on sites outside the view of Highway 1.

These density credits also may be sold and in some cases the county may have to step in and buy the property to keep it as open space.

The TDC policy has been assailed by some

Carmel schoolchildren 'recalled' from Spain

PRESIDENT REAGAN'S decision to attack Libya has forced 20 Carmel Middle School students to cut short by five days their trip to Barcelona, Spain.

The students have been in Spain since April 8 as part of an exchange program and were not scheduled to return until Sunday.

"We're calling them back because of our concern over the political situation," Supt. Robert Infelise told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook prior to the Tuesday afternoon board meeting.

The students were scheduled to arrive at San Francisco International Airport last night.

In school board action April 15, trustees announced that they will seek applications for the position vacated by Doyle Clayton, who resigned April 2.

Applications for a school board position must be made to the district office by Friday, May 9. Trustees will interview applicants Tuesday, May 13 and select a new board member Tuesday, May 20.

Trustees postponed until April 29 a review of a proposed reshuffling of several administrative staff positions because of the absence of board member Hilton Bialek.

Planning commission

Videos, T-shirts, antiques all get go-ahead

By NANCY HILLS

VIDEOS RENTALS, T-shirts and an antique store expansion were all approved during the April 9 Carmel Planning Commission meeting.

The commission ruled that the Village Market could rent and sell video cassettes, approved a use permit for Nature Company, which included the sale of "theme T-shirts," and allowed the expansion of Great Things Antiques on Lincoln Street.

Though one commissioner called the idea "ludicrous" and the land use committee recommended denial, the Village Market business license was expanded to include rental and sale of video cassettes. The commission added a condition that no X-rated tapes be sold or rented.

Ellie Anderson, Village Market owner, wrote two letters to the planning commission stating "many of our customers have expressed an interest in the rental of video cassettes," and the store's clientele was mainly local residents. Many of his customers walk to the store located on the corner of Dolores Street and Eighth Avenue, he wrote, so parking would not be a problem.

The application was granted after a discussion between the commissioners that centered on whether the cassettes are appropriate merchandise in a grocery store. Video cassette rental is not listed in the business coding system the city uses for zoning purposes, the Standard Industrial Classification.

Commissioner Thomas Nash said "that he was in favor of the situation" for a couple of reasons.

"To show how outdated the SIC is, there is no reference for videos at all. He is not turning it into a video store...he runs a local market."

Nash added that he felt many types of local retail businesses are difficult to keep operating and the commission should encourage them as much as possible. Video rental is a resident-oriented service, Nash said.

Chairman Gene Cava agreed with Nash saying that the store is adjacent to the R-1 district which would want this service and it is "uniquely resident serving."

Cava said that he had gone and looked into other markets in the area and found that they sold many things such as pantyhose and razors not listed in the SIC grocery store classification.

A differing opinion was expressed by Commissioner Sandy Swain who said she could "sum it up one word — no" when asked how she felt about videos being rented and sold from the market.

"I find the idea of putting video tapes in a grocery store ludicrous. It opens the door to all kinds of things," she said.

Another objection to the application came from Commissioner Gene Hammond.

"I have to stick with the land use committee decision. I feel it is just not appropriate to that location," he said.

Anne Woolworth, a candidate for city council in the last election, told the board that she was "representing a lot of residents on Lincoln (Street)." Woolworth said the area already had a great deal of activity and she objected to the traffic video rentals would attract.

"It would be a draw for those people without mufflers (on their cars)," she said.

"The inference that video cassettes are a 'no-no' is something I find objectionable," Commissioner Arthur Mertens said, though he stated he had been against the idea during the land use committee review of the application.

In fact, Mertens said, he and his wife own a VCR, but added "I have no idea how the darn thing works."

Another commissioner, Marjorie Montelius, said that "as an owner of a VCR, I would like a rental place in Carmel. I don't use it (the VCR) because I now have to go to the mouth of the Valley to get tapes."

The planning commission approved the business license change with a 4-2 vote, with Swain and Hammond voting against the amendment.

VIDEO TAPES were not the only merchandise that sparked comment from the commission.

The Nature Company, a company dealing in natural history headquartered in Berkeley, received a use permit that allows it to sell T-shirts along with other merchandise.

The store applied for a permit to occupy a commercial space on Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets. The location is one of two retail stores created from the single space formerly occupied by Sprouse-Reitz Variety Store.

The Nature Company specializes in products that are related to natural history, science and education. The merchandise includes albums, books, trail maps, prints, optics and reproductions of plants and animals.

The store will also sell some articles of clothing, including sweatshirts and T-shirts depicting animals, many of them endangered species, Nature Company President Tom Wrubel told the board.

Though the application received a recommendation for approval from the land use committee, Swain raised the first concern.

Swain told Wrubel she had "several calls since it (the application) was published in the local newspaper." These callers had told her "there was a great deal of jewelry sold in the other stores" the Nature Company owns in the San Francisco Bay area.

Wrubel said the store does have jewelry but it represents only five percent of sales. The animals are representational and are not the type of thing where they have "big smiles on their faces and waving a flag."

Children relate to and grow fond of animals they have worn as jewelry, Wrubel said.

After jewelry, the commission discussed the sale of T-shirts.

Many businesses "escape classification," Nash said, and a theme store such as this is one of those. As long as the T-shirt stays within the theme, he would approve, he said.

Hammond agreed that "the theme is what is important," adding that "as long as the theme isn't the one we've seen around here lately."

Nash continued, stating that "certain items have become an anathema to Carmel" and that the city has taken the direction of limiting these things," naming antique stores and T-shirts as examples.

However, control does not require a "blanket approach" and every T-shirt or piece of jewelry does not constitute a threat, he said. Restrictions on these items already in place, Nash said, are sufficient.

A motion made by Montelius to eliminate T-shirts from the 10 percent accessories allowed at the store failed to pass and the commission voted to give Nature Company its use permit.

anything else," Nash said and the application passed unanimously.

IN OTHER business, the commission voted to approve:

- A use permit for a new restaurant owned by Dennis Rowedder, Sticky Wicket, on Dolores Street planned as an English restaurant and tea room. The commission included the sale of items relating to Great Britain and "the royal wedding" as requested by Patricia Rowedder. The commission determined that the sale of china and such artifacts, if not more than 10 percent of the space or gross sales, was in keeping with an English restaurant.

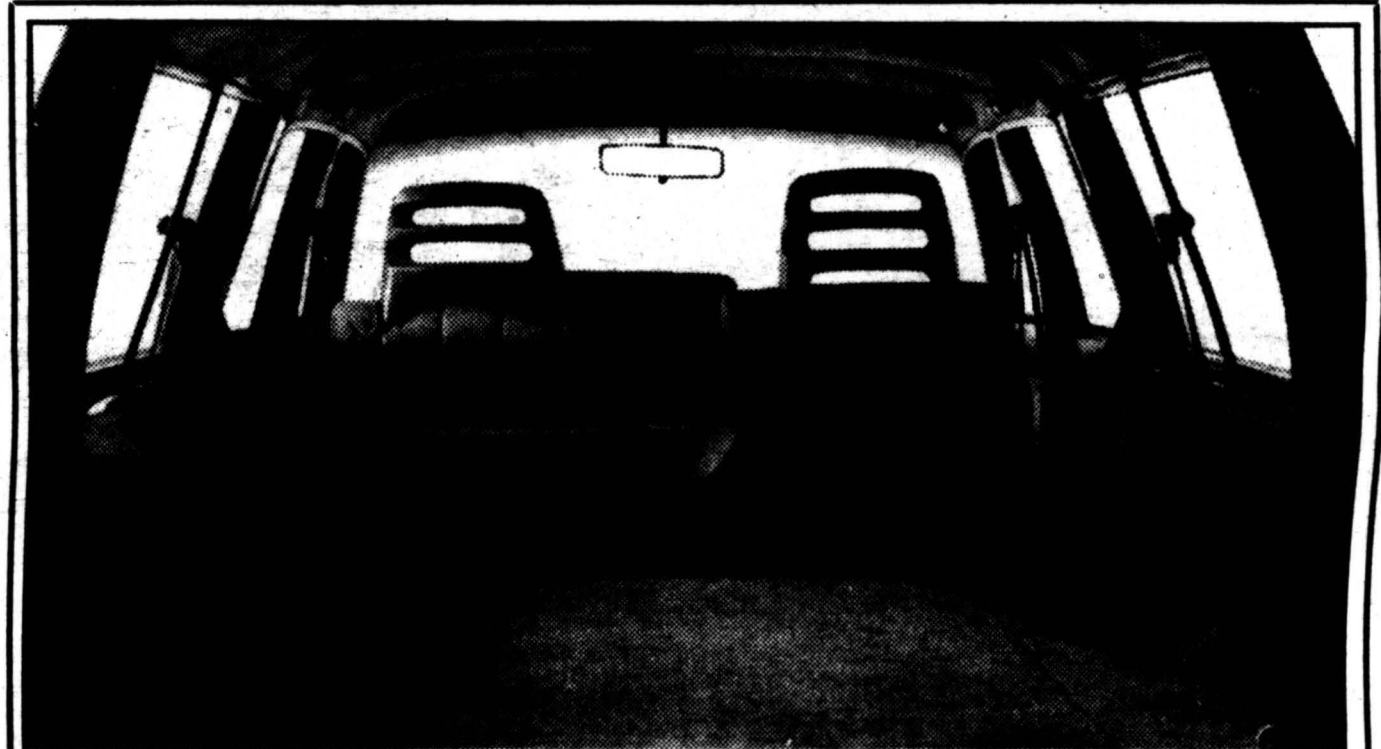

- Passed a use permit for Thomas Testa's and Maurice Himy's men's and women's clothing store on the corner of Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street. Testa told the commission the store would sell primarily men's clothing imported from Italy.

Testa said he and his partner felt that there was a need for more high style men's clothing store in the area. Most stores around Carmel, Testa said, carry more traditional clothes. Testa and Himy have another store on Union Street in San Francisco.

- Passed a use permit for Ladyfingers Jewelry to move into the current location of The Carmel Coin and Stamp Store on Dolores Street near Ocean Avenue. At the same time, the commission granted a use permit for a jewelry and watch repair shop on Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue where Ladyfingers is currently located.

GREAT THINGS Antiques on Lincoln Street near Ocean Avenue was granted a use permit to expand into the adjacent vacant store.

Brian Roseth, assistant planner, told the commission that an antique store had previously occupied the site which meant that another one could move in "anyway" if the expansion was denied. Roseth added that Great Things provides some resident-oriented services such as repair and delivery. "This is more of a practical decision than

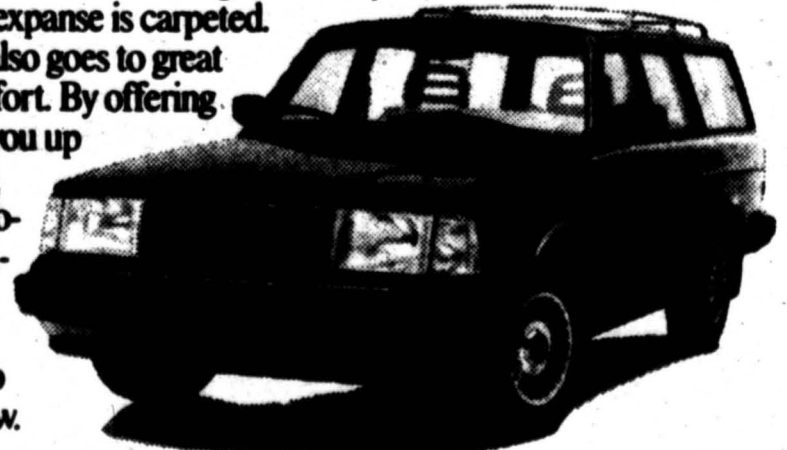

IN STREAMLINING THE VOLVO 240 WAGON, ONE AREA REMAINED LARGELY UNCHANGED.

The new Volvo 240 Wagon has been streamlined from the front grille right back to the tailgate handle.

Yet, through Volvo engineering, what's in between has been kept the same: 76 cubic feet of loading space with the rear seat down. Which translates into an area that's more than six feet long and nearly three and a half feet wide. And for '86, the entire expanse is carpeted.

The Volvo 240 Wagon also goes to great lengths in another area: comfort. By offering heated front seats that back you up with more support than ever.

So why settle for an aerodynamic wagon that offers little in the way of cargo space, when you can buy the one that offers a lot: the '86 Volvo 240 Wagon at your dealer now.

Eastwood-Townsend: Anatomy of an election

'April is the cruelest month'

T. S. Eliot

By KEN FADEM

CARMEL POLITICS had always taken place in a private and intimate small town atmosphere. Issues were discussed between neighbors over a fence, where one could push the ivy

'The election of Mayor Eastwood is an expression of faith that this community is capable of facing the complexities of contemporary life without losing itself in the process.'

aside and come nose to nose with personal lives, their concerns, opinions, and ultimately their votes. The loyalty of a few extra supporters might be had for the price of a cup of tea and some warm conversation, a sense of neighborly understanding.

The feeling was insular, and the residents went about their activities comfortable in the belief that, despite the many visitors, this is a private community and its governing body is a private affair and shall always remain just that.

Then Clint Eastwood declared his candidacy for mayor.

Overnight the backyard fences became politically obsolete; this election campaign would take place before crowded forums and the press. The residents of Carmel were suddenly challenged to sample the richness of a controversy. They were asked to entertain the unprecedented notion that they had entered into a political sphere with greater style and broader implications than had ever been anticipated. Carmel found itself in an atmosphere of intense participation by all, and though the compact size of the town still offered plenty of opportunity for intimate contact (both with the candidates and between the voters), the psychological shell of insularity was permanently ruptured.

When Clint Eastwood jumped into this election race I believed that Charlotte Townsend had a better chance of being elected Empress of China than of being reelected mayor of Carmel. The notorious entertainer's signature on the mayoral application was like ominous graffiti on a wailing wall. It heralded a contemporary style and its import would not be erased. I shall always wonder whether Townsend sensed that immediately. She must have at least guessed that she was in for a battle for which she had not prepared.

The major protagonists in this drama reminded me (hedgingly) of characters in a Sophoclean play. Charlotte is the tragic heroine who unexpectedly finds herself embroiled in a greater plot directed by the Fates, with an outcome of sure probability, but who is left free to respond to the situation and act out her role as she sees fit. Like the Greeks we still expect dignity in the face of disaster. Clint is a little more difficult (appropriately so) to fit into the ancient script. His popular mythological image necessitates casting him larger than life...a messenger of the gods who comes forward to invoke the ensuing consequences.

In fact Eastwood's popularity brought about the very first issue of the campaign. It concerned the effect of a "media blitz" upon the outcome of the election: would it cloud the issues? would it influence a potentially vainglorious vote, with which the residents would have to live long after the media was gone? Outside of the local press the media was obviously not the least bit interested in Carmel's intense affairs; they wanted shots of Eastwood, period, but their presence was at first disconcerting to the voters.

I suggest that the "media circus" issue, if anything, may have pushed the voters toward more serious consideration of issues. If the world was going to watch, then they, the people of Carmel, would put on a show of political intelligence and perception of which they would feel truly proud and serve themselves in the bargain.

By and large I believe the media had little influence on the outcome. If a number of votes melted into the Eastwood myth (success by association) I suggest that number was not significant enough to swing this election. However difficult it may be to accurately assess the currents that surround and emanate from a figure like the actor, the evidence here in Carmel pointed to a vote that was decided on the basis of a broad and carefully considered perspective. The media issue dissolved rapidly, and the events moved to center stage.

Eastwood's campaign got off to a slow start. He gave the initial impression of moving cautiously in an unfamiliar role, kind of feeling his way until the script warmed to a surer sense of direction. Despite the affable smile he seemed to be prowling the territory. So far all he had done was to draw a crowd and generate a lot of excitement. He must have known that he would have to prove his sincerity to the voters but wasn't quite sure yet how to do it. Perhaps he was waiting to see how his only adversary, Townsend, would react.

Townsend still sat as the incumbent and could have used her position to control this campaign. She could have stayed aloft (not aloof) in the dignity of the mayoral robes, spoken to her constituency with the quiet, sure wisdom of experience, and enhanced the substance of her personal convictions in a role for which she was already cast. The Fates had stepped in to twist the plot, but as long as she was still mayor she could continue to direct the momentum of events in Carmel, albeit with unusual difficulty now. Literally, she could have called her own press conferences and arranged to talk with clubs and groups exclusively without the brouhaha of the other political aspirants who had yet to walk in the mayor's shoes. She could make them struggle to rise to her level of achievement. She did none of this.

Instead she abandoned this major advantage and allowed herself to be drawn into the trenches. The Eastwood forces had dropped the bait that Townsend was not a fighter and would roll over in the presence of a High Plains Drifter. She swallowed the bait and came to the forums swinging like a club fighter ready to tough it out with anyone (also waiting with the others for the opportunity for a paltry three-minute spiel). The spunky mayor did prove herself adept at slugging it out — her strongest showing, knowledgeable and unhesitant, was in the television debates a week prior to election — but Rocky V she was not. Her record was not easy to defend in the new atmosphere, and she was vulnerable to accusations and political right hooks. More importantly, she had let the contenders off the hook of having to scramble upwards.

After a few public forums it looked like Eastwood could call the shots and control the election. It was apparent by then that Townsend did not have a campaign strategy at all. Her years of political involvement in Carmel had not prepared her for this event. She entered the scramble with an aura of confusion and defensiveness about her; she was not used to being attacked vehemently or having her sense of achievement seriously questioned. Her calm, clear, in-control image as mayor of Carmel for four years was looking brittle. Townsend was never comfortable in the fray. It may have never occurred to her that there is more than one way to be tough.

Eastwood was gaining confidence and solidifying his platform. The community loved the excitement he continued to generate and was becoming more confident of his sincerity. By attacking him Townsend played right into his candidacy: if Townsend took him seriously, certainly the rest of the community would.

To reinforce this confidence Eastwood had to show he was not using his candidacy for world press — a silly notion to start with; he doesn't need it. While he was forced then politically to hide from the media, Townsend was under no such pressure; she was free to woo the eager press.

With humor and a gracious willingness to play for brief moments in the media/game she could have presented to the world and to her own town a model of an educated, cultured, and successful woman, which she is. While Eastwood was slipping through back doors she could have "upstaged" him at the front door, beat him at his own game, simply by facing the cameras and being charming. In the process she might have defused some of Eastwood's power, locally that is, where it counted for her, as though his bid to become mayor of Carmel was a great lark (I'm not suggesting it was) and not to be taken seriously. Instead she brushed past the cameras with a heavy persona and silence.

Charlotte Townsend apparently was not tuned to the present political and psychological atmosphere of Carmel, which, sponsored by business people and many residents alike, was harboring a strong potential for serious change. I believe Townsend made the critical mistake of having become too enamored with her own political point of view, and this blinded her to the discontent that had grown into an effective force of opposition.

Her own view of the seriousness of her political role in Carmel took on the quality of an exorbitant singularity and led to the polarized position that was to unseat her. There is inevitability not only in the whims of the Fates but in our own actions as well.

To the dislodged conspirators of opposition Eastwood appeared like a godsend, like a mythical hero (a messenger) unexpected but most welcome. He was the needed catalyst, and their frustration could now rise to the surface to find effective gratification on a ballot.

Eastwood had done his research; he had polled the residents of Carmel before jumping into the race. Had the mayor's position been more secure, Eastwood would never have entered his challenge. He did his homework and knew that he had a sound chance to win — he's not a man who sets out to lose. Though he did not run a sparkling campaign (much to my surprise he was flat in the televised debates), he didn't have to. Votes of resentment against the incumbent had nowhere else to go but to Eastwood.

I would like to believe that the vote was largely decided on the basis of personal worldview, the old weltanschauung with a modern acceleration clause. Either the Carmelite was ready and willing to make some accommodations to the dynamics of communal change and face the present with flexibility as well as conviction, or he/she would cling to the tenacity of a past-oriented administration in an effort to exempt Carmel at all cost from the forces occurring throughout the world and affecting all humanity.

To continue in a traditionalist and insular stance would become, in this observer's opinion, eventually disastrous. The fear of change can lead us to become a caricature of the past, while place becomes a movie set, turning reality into fantasy. The election of Mayor Eastwood is an expression of faith that this community is capable of facing the complexities of contemporary life without losing itself in the process.

As we conclude the events of the 20th century the only viable role model can be one which truly understands and has a feel for the time in which it exists.

Those earnest governors of Carmel who drafted the "Magna Carta" of 1929 could no more suspect the events of the next two decades, depression and world war, then they could foresee social and psychological developments in the making 56 years later. Even the best minds of our civilization couldn't really get a purchase on our present trends until the early 1960s after 15 years of postwar innovation. If any master plan is to be fruitful for this community, it will have to be a rough compendium of contemporary views and be aware of its own inevitable obsolescence.

We humans are not quite the seers we would like to think we are. We can only act on the basis of our present knowledge and psychological need. Future generations will do the same.

Carmel serves many of its residents as the realization of a fantasy, one of our strongest cultural drives. There is identity here with the outer environment, an image of natural wealth, that reflects our inner fantasy landscape. It provides a personal sanctuary, and because the emotional importance of that sanctuary is shared by enough individuals it becomes also a political reality.

The electorate of Carmel has forged a reflection of its will; there is not only a new mayor but a new image of the present consciousness — Tanquam in speculo, as in a mirror.

From vision to reality: innovative pre-school

Kreg and Maren Baker moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1981. Like so many other individuals it was their dream to live and work in this beautiful area. Kreg continued to commute to his job as a school principal in Santa Clara and Maren opened the Pheasant's Eye Restaurant in Pacific Grove.

Tiring of the long commute Kreg resigned his principalship and became the property manager of the Carmel Plaza. He looks back on that job as a "real opportunity" to utilize his 12-plus years as a teacher and school principal to employ his educational and managerial skills in a different setting.

It was about six months into the job that he said he started to miss "the kids" and education. "It's like an addiction, it gets into your blood," he said. So, he decided to open his own pre-school and day care center.

"I've had a vision for a long time of having a school where I could bring together the best of what I've experienced for kids in a setting where my staff and I would be responsible for its creation and implementation," Baker said.

This vision became a reality recently when he opened the Bayview Children's Center, a pre-school day care program in the foothills above Seaside overlooking Monterey Bay.

"I'm incredibly excited about what we have to offer," Baker said. "We have taken a five-classroom community school that is easily accessible from all Monterey Peninsula cities, renovated it and added a 'state-of-the-art' playground apparatus and created an environment that is warm, safe and nurturing."

"Our dynamic curriculum addresses acquiring all of the skills children need to have to be prepared for what I know they will be facing as they venture into the realm of formal education."

"The curriculum at Bayview Children's Center is based on enhancing the natural development of a child's learning potential. It is a balanced program of activities carefully planned to ensure the development and acquisition of academic, physical, social and language skills. This is done in part by tapping the child's natural curiosity to learn. That's why our motto is 'Where fun and learning join together.'"

The Bakers see it as their responsibility to provide a program that does what it says it will do. To live up to that responsibility they have developed a consultative support team consisting of a psychologist, speech and language specialist, physical education specialist, a nurse and a computer education specialist who will be available to provide in-service training for staff and parents, and will ensure that the program is kept current and on task with the job of teaching.

"We see parents as an integral part of the educational process, and feel we are partners in our investment in the children and their future," Baker said.

He added that their commitment to the children of the Monterey Peninsula is to provide the type of environment and program that will create the foundation to take life on as a committed citizen.

BEHIND THE LINES

BY MICHAEL GARDNER

'Carmel City Hall, can you hold?'

IF SHE was still with us today, Ma Bell would love Carmel, as I'm sure Eastman-Kodak does by now.

Post election at Carmel City Hall: telephone calls from around the world, starting at 7:30 in the morning and not letting up throughout the day.

According to Personnel Officer Jerry Pullen, there was "at least" a call every 90 seconds April 9.

Chris Gibson, who fielded most of those calls, probably has ringing in her ears each night as she leaves. Her home phone is rumored to be unplugged and stuffed in the closet.

Big phone bills for the media — actually looking at the news conference election night I thought they were all here — calling local restaurants, bars and the Carmel Pine Cone / Carmel Valley Outlook for live telephone interviews.

We're on first-name basis with DJs from BBC to St. Louis, Mo. To heck with Charlotte, I for one would like to be interviewed by Larry King...live. (Help, I've succumbed to the media mania! Is there an exorcist in the house?)

I also would have liked to had a film concession in town these past few weeks, or at least some stock in Eastman-Kodak.

Let's say there were all told 50 still photographers in town in the 10 weeks since Clint Eastwood sent the newswires into overtime by announcing his candidacy.

Each photographer no doubt shot a minimum of 25 rolls of film over the campaign. At $5 a roll (figured by averaging the cost of black and white and color) that means that each photographer spent at least $125 on film.

Multiply that by 50, and you get $6,250 on film alone. Now, add in the tourists and television crews and you'll have a fair profit for the photo companies.

PLUGS, PLUGS AND MORE PLUGS

I think the media as a whole owes a big thank you to the city of Carmel for the relatively smooth election night.

Let's just name some names, so at least the local press — like the Pine Cone — can say thanks.

Down at city hall, Jeanne Brehmer, with the assistance of Sandy Farrell, coordinated all of the arrangements — a planning task that began the day after Eastwood announced.

Brehmer and City Administrator Doug Schmitz developed the media credential process and Sunset Center press conference. Otherwise, the press invasion at city hall would have squeezed out the some 50 residents who attended the ballot counting.

Mary Jahr-Purvis, normally the code enforcement officer, kept phone callers from Minnesota to London up to date as the count came in.

Mary tried to keep track of the callers but "I stopped at three dozen and then it got to be a lot."

Assistant Fire Chief Vern Allred was on hand to keep crowd capacity at safe levels. The council chamber was at capacity with 100 inside, and another 30 or so milling in the administrative offices and at least that many outside.

Police protection was provided by the regulars, plus Jack McGilvray, decked out in his uniform blue. I hear the ladies were as impressed with the good chief as they have been with the new mayor. Better keep that unlisted number Jack.

Jack, by the way, was happy to get the tuneup for the papal visit, rumored for September 1987.

Media heavyweights here for Clint say this was just a sideshow compared to the real press circus that follows the pope.

Other staff helping out at city hall included

RICHARD TYLER (center), director of Sunset Center discussed plans with Associated Press writer Steve Wilstein while

Tim Meroney, Mimi Thorngate-Gottlund and Nan Roth.

Meanwhile, most of the media (there was just a press pool at city hall) were at Sunset Center waiting for election results and subsequent press conference.

In charge of that operation was Richard Tyler, director of Sunset Center. Tyler reported that there were 180 journalists present representing 76 newspapers, magazines, radio stations and television.

The media came from as far away as Australia, Fiji, France, South Korea, Brazil, and Belgium. Also on hand were the BBC and Voice of America.

Thanks to Tyler and staffers Marion Engstrom and Betty Preddy, things went smoothly down at Sunset Center. Also going down was the coffee; the press drank 320 cups.

Let's not forget Gary Kelly, who spent all day as City Forester and then checked in the media. And Buzz Cole, Benny Martino and Ross Brown stood by in the event of any technical problems at Carpenter Hall.

The usual contingent of police and fire were there for crowd control.

Tyler said that the media was "very courteous and cooperative. It was a real pleasure working with professionals."

OPENING DAY DIAMOND VISION

With all of the election mania, one could be forgiven for forgetting Opening Day. But Opening Day did not forget Clint.

Tuesday night the Oakland A's were in the process of losing their season opener to the visiting Minnesota Twins when news of Clint's win was flashed. According to the Chronicle Sporting Green:

"The Carmel election did prove to be one of the few high points for the 44,726 fans at the A's contest.

"Twice during the game a vote total was flashed on Oakland's Diamond Vision screen, triggering an instant crowd reaction. It was the loudest cheer of the night."

WIRED IN THE CITY

Telegrams have been pouring into city hall — 48 of them on Wednesday morning alone. Sorry, no singing telegrams for Clint.

SPEAKING OF...

President Reagan, whose phone calls to the locker rooms of winning sports teams are more an embarrassment than an event, thankfully held off until Wednesday a.m. to call Clint rather than capitalizing on the media attention at Sunset Center Tuesday night.

Rustled out of bed, Clint chatted with the Bedtime for Bonzo star for several minutes.

The president, according to Clint, said, "What is an actor who once played with a monkey doing in politics?"

Both Reagan and Eastwood have starred in movies with chimps holding down second billing.

Clint also joked that he's considering Mr. Eastwood Goes to Carmel as his next film project, obviously a reference to one of the most famous political films, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.

Speaking of that film's star, Jimmy Stewart also called Clint with congrats.

Other later callers to city hall included Gov. George Deukmejian, singer Merle Haggard and the White House (again).

NO REST FOR DAVE

Deposed Councilman David Maradei, who has been unmercifully teased by his postal employees, found no solace in returning from San Francisco after the election.

The crew had decorated Dave's office with black crepe paper and "Clint For Mayor" posters.

CLINT'S RIGHT ARM

Sue Hutchinson, who masterfully pieced together Eastwood's election campaign, will be staying on to help Clint in his new duties.

Details are to be worked out, but Hutchinson expects to be Clint's "right arm."

"It's a little nebulous right now," she said.

Hutchinson will be paid by Eastwood, not the city. And an office will be found. "We will not be at city hall," she said.

Hutchinson added that the office number will be listed and messages returned by Eastwood. "He'll be very accessible by phone," she added.

TIME FOR A PURGE

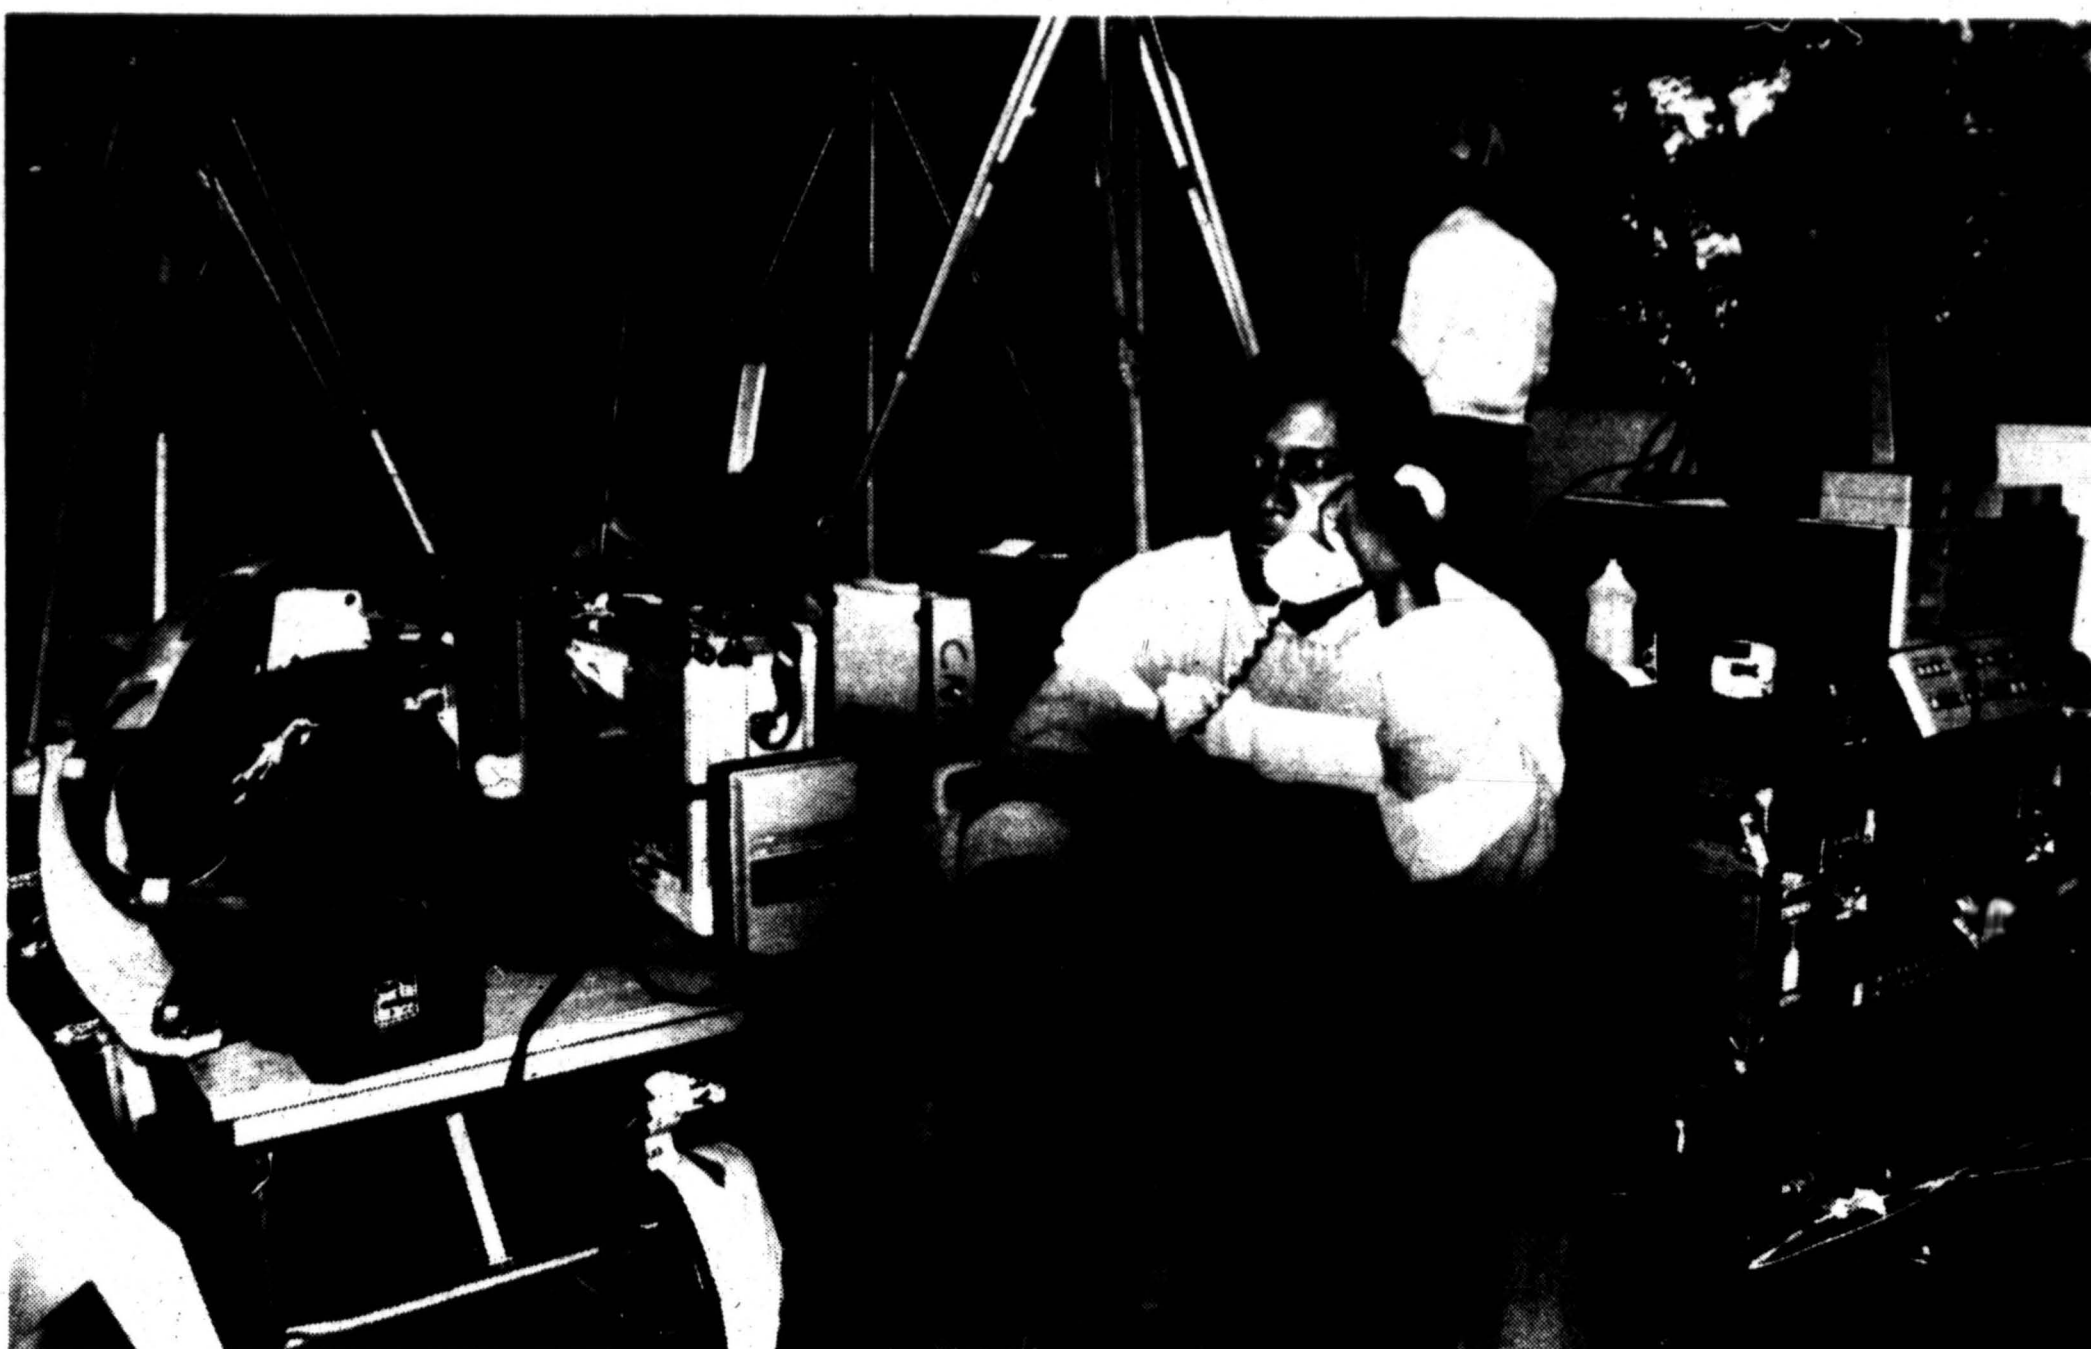

The voter registration issue turned up zilch in terms of real fraud, but there is an underlying problem that should be addressed.

When we did the election telephone poll, at least a dozen listed phone numbers were found to belong to businesses.

People I know who have since moved also were on the voter registration rolls.

Now there's word that Townsend found 69 of her campaign mailings in her post office box marked "undeliverable — return to sender," meaning that the voter had moved.

That is a further indication that the voter registration rolls are sorely in need of revamping.

Methinks a purge is in order.

MAIL CALL

At least 700 letters were delivered and it

WILL CARMEL finally get its ice cream parlor?

That is one of the questions the Carmel Planning Commission will attempt to answer again at its 4 p.m. Wednesday, April 23 meeting in the Carmel City Council chambers.

The commission will review an application by William Lawson to open a takeout ice cream store in the current location of Harold Wamsley's barber shop on San Carlos Street near Ocean Avenue. The land use committee has recommended denial of the use permit because the location does not meet city ordinances on ice cream parlors and the store would be exclusively takeout, Planning Director Diane White explained.

Lawson was one of the owners of Swensen's Ice Cream Parlor, formerly located on Ocean Avenue near Mission Street. Lawson made the ice cream for the Carmel Swensen's in a plant in Seaside and plans to do the same for the new parlor.

Lawson said he has been looking for a spot to reopen the parlor since it closed, but not as a franchise operation. Finding a new location has been difficult, he said, because of Carmel's water ordinance. That ordinance states a business cannot use more water than the business that previously occupied the space.

Though the land use committee recommended denial for the store, which will be named Carmel Ice Cream Company, it has recommended that the planning commission forward to the city council a resolution to amend the code covering places that sell ice cream.

According to Diane White, planning director, an establishment that serves ice cream is considered an eating establishment by law.

An eating place needs two restrooms and cannot be primarily takeout food.

The location Lawson is requesting a use permit for has no restrooms and is too small to provide seating, White said. The Carmel Ice Cream Company would have to be exclusively takeout, and that is also against city codes, White explained.

The resolution, she said, would reclassify places that serve ice cream separately from eating places.

The resolution might include dropping the requirement for restroom facilities but retain the need for some seating with controls on pickup and takeout, White said. Franchise operations would remain illegal.

If Lawson's application is denied, the commission might have a second chance in May to approve an ice cream store. Carmel businessman Michael Montana has also applied for an ice cream parlor. Montana's application is for Wishart's Bakery location; he withdrew an application for an apparel store in the same location.

An application last year by Montana and his partner, attorney Jim Newhouse, for another ice cream parlor called Carmel Creamery on Mission Street gained national attention when its permit was denied by the City of Carmel, causing what some have called the "Ice Cream Cone Fiasco" and making it a prime issue in the recent election. The denial was based on the water ordinance and the takeout food nature of ice cream cones.

Wishart's space, which has been on the market for more than a year, is large enough to allow tables, White said, and has restrooms.

Montana's application should be heard by the planning commission May 14.

During its April 23 meeting, the planning commission will also review:

- A conditional use permit for a real estate office on the southwest corner of Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue called Benetti & Associates.

- An application for an art gallery in the current location of 20th Century Masters on Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

Owners of the new gallery, Doney Pavik and Diana Knight, told the land use committee that they would also have art classes for residents.

- A lot line adjustment for Lee Hill on San Antonio Street between Second and Fourth avenues.

- A lot line adjustment for Harold Santee on the northwest corner of San Antonio Street and Santa Lucia Avenue.

MONTEREY PENINSULA HONORS VOLUNTEERS

April 20-17 is designated as National Volunteer Week, is a time to salute the men, women and young people in our peninsula who, whether through individual or collective efforts, offer their time, talents and energy in a myriad of causes.

Monterey Peninsula volunteers will be honored at a recognition ceremony Wednesday, April 23 at the Sheraton Hotel. All agencies and organizations in the Monterey Peninsula using volunteers are invited to submit the name or names of outstanding volunteers to the office of Volunteers In Action, 444 Pearl St., Monterey, to be included in the honoring ceremony.

In Monterey Peninsula, volunteers can be found daily working in hospitals, schools, prisons, churches, social and health agencies. Their duties range anywhere from coaching a neighborhood baseball team to serving in a leadership role in community organizations. Without them where would we be? Volunteers are our community's greatest natural resource and our best hope for a strong future.

During National Volunteer Week, let's say "Thank you for caring" to all of Monterey Peninsula volunteers.

"PEACE LINKS" FOUNDING PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS NEW FORUM

In continuing its examination of creative alternatives to war, the New Forum, Carmel, presents Betty Flanagan Bumpers at its monthly luncheon, Monday, April 21, 12 noon at the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Bumpers is the founder and president of "Peace Links", an organization dedicated to furthering the action of peace and reducing the threat of nuclear war. Founded in 1982, "Peace Links" has active groups in more than 40 states involving more than 40,000 people.

The wife of Sen. Dale Bumpers (D-Ark), she has been instrumental in establishing and maintaining the immunization program for children at the U.S. Center for Disease Control. She serves on several boards and is recognized and honored by numerous organizations for her dedication. Recent awards include the 1985 Woman of Conscience Award from the National Council of Women of the United States and an honorary doctor of laws degree from Hendrix college and University of Arkansas in Little Rock.

In her belief that nuclear war is the "ultimate environmental issue" Bumpers will address the New Forum on "Citizenship: Responsibility to Peace."

Reservations for the New Forum luncheon and Bumpers' lecture are $13 and must be made in advance by writing: The New Forum, P.O. Box 5595, Carmel, Ca. 93921; or by calling May Waldroup at 624-1803.

Wedded bliss

ROGER RUST of Carmel and Barbara Varvaez got married at 9 a.m. Saturday, April 12 in Carmel. That wouldn't in itself be such big news, but the couple got married during the breakfast rush hour at Friar Tuck's restaurant. About 20 people attended the wedding, but it wasn't known how many were there for the wedding or for breakfast. (Michael Gardner photo.)

No-host cocktails are at 6 p.m., with dinner at 7 p.m., cost is $20 per person. The public is invited to make reservations by calling 649-0834.

CARMEL STUDENT — ALL STATE FLUTIST

Ned McGowan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McGowan of Carmel, has been selected first chair of the first stand of the flute section at the All-State Band rehearsals in Anaheim.

McGowan is among the 10 Robert Louis Stevenson School students who were selected to the All-State music ensembles. First chair positions are awarded to only one musician in each instrumental section. The competition is very intense among all the top California high school musicians.

McGowan is the second student from Stevenson School to be selected for a first chair, first stand position this year. Leah Bayes, a freshman from Monterey, was selected for the honor in the violin section earlier this week.

ARTHRITIS FOUNDATION BOARD ELECTS OFFICERS

The Monterey Bay Area Branch, Arthritis Foundation offers professional and patient information as well as education services to residents of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

The recently elected Advisory Board president is Maria Weber, RN of Carmel Valley. Marc Lieberman, M.D. of Corral de Tierra, will continue serving as vice president. Carole Nirady of Aptos is secretary/treasurer.

Weber has been an active member of the local Arthritis Foundation Board since 1983 and has also served as a Self-Help Course Instructor for several years.

"We're particularly interested in increasing our visibility throughout the Monterey Bay Area so the many people who either have arthritis or are affected by it will know we're here to help," said Weber. "Our local office is located on Cass Street in Monterey — a particularly good location for us since we're close to many other local health services and doctors. We're convenient for people to stop in for a visit to pick up literature and get assistance."

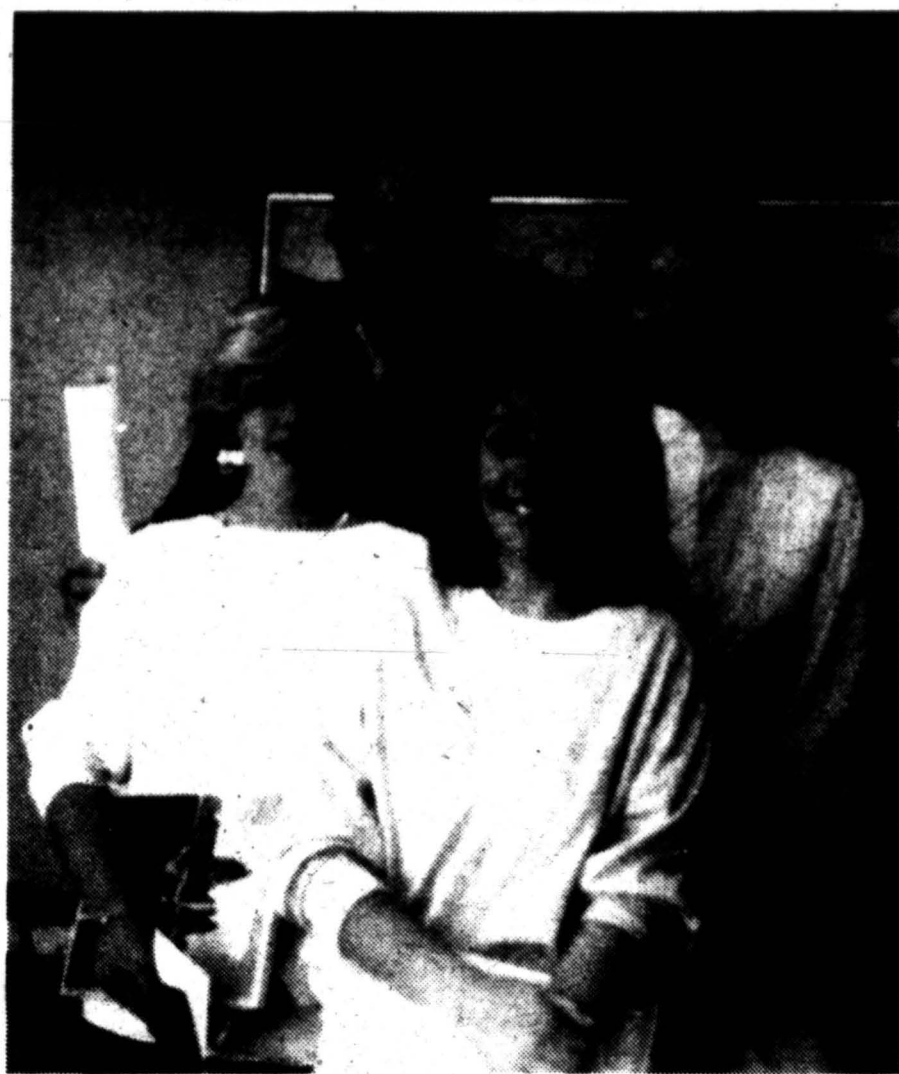

"Along with continuing to expand our services, this year we hope to give more of our local residents the chance to become involved in the foundation's work," she added. "There are many volunteer opportunities available throughout the area. We also need and appreciate current as well as new financial supporters who join us in carrying on the foundation's essential services and research. Arthritis is America's number one crippling disease — it affects 35 million men, women and children in America — one in seven people. The Arthritis Foundation hopes, through its programs and services, to find the cause, prevention and cure for this debilitating disease."

Other members of the Monterey Bay Area Arthritis Foundation Advisory Board include the following: Ronald Chaplan, M.D.; Stephen Domenik; Edward Evans; Jerry Ginsburg, M.D.; Sandra McGregor, RPT; Seth Potter; John Roland; and Stephen Sillman.

Additional information about services available through the Arthritis Foundation is available by calling the Monterey office, 373-6664.

VENTANA 1986 MOBIL FOUR-STAR AWARD

America's most prestigious and best-selling guidebook, the

Mobil Travel Guide, has awarded Ventana Restaurant in Big Sur four stars for 1986.

The Four-Star rating means the Mobil Travel Guide recognizes Ventana as "Outstanding — worth a special trip." The award, given annually, is one of the most respected in the dining and lodging industry.

This is the fifth consecutive year that Ventana has been named a Mobil Four-Star winner. This year the Mobil Travel Guide staff rated more than 21,000 establishments in 4,000 towns and cities across the United States and Canada. Ventana is one of only 509 hotels, motels, resorts, inns and restaurants to win four stars.

"We are pleased to recognize Ventana's dedication to excellence," said Arnold J. Fury, manager, travel programs, Mobil Oil Corp. "The Four-Star Award means this restaurant is exceptional and worth a special trip."

"Receiving a Four-Star Award from the Mobil Travel Guide places Ventana in the ranks of the outstanding establishments in the food and lodging industry," said R.E. Bussinger vice president/general manager. "The Mobil Travel Guide's standards are the strictest in the travel business."

More unique ways to enjoy The Crossroads:

The casual elegance of our California lifestyle is evident in the easy-care sportswear to be found at Neil's Apparel for women, men, and the young at heart! Chic Petite takes a different fashion approach. They outfit women who require petite sizes 2 to 12, and who are 5' 4" and under. Wear sizes 4 to 16? Then stop by Rodier Paris and introduce yourself to classic French fashions that set you apart from the ordinary.

For a change of pace, step into Willow Tea Room Studio see Art Nouveau, English and American arts, books, and crafts ... and everything for tea! Then, enjoy the folk arts and crafts at Quail Corner. You'll find one-of-a-kind works of art, all made by hand.

How about the men in your life? Mostly for men is the answer. It's the place to gift shop for men of all ages, interests, and personal preferences. Then, go next door and get him a card to remember at Cardiff Stationery & Gifts. And, be sure to see all their other fine items for home or office.

Buy sumptuous woolsens for both women and men at Bill Tosetti's Woolen Shop, the famous names that you prefer are all here in rich array. Then, treat yourself to Candy Cupboard of Carmel. They feature a large selection of sugar-and-salt-free candies ...and more!

For those women of today who prefer to wear soft and supple fashions, we suggest that you visit Cats for "things to wrap you in comfort."

the Ramada Inn to launch a peninsula unit of the WAVES National Corporation recently.

In accepting her new commission of leadership, Toepel, who had served with the Navy Reserves from 1942-46, asked that other officers for the group be appointed. Genevieve Wallace, Monterey, vice-president, Wallace served eight years with the Navy; Audrey Perkins, Salinas, retired as a Master Chief after 26 years, treasurer; Mary Ann Shepherd, Seaside, served during the Korean War, secretary; Dorothy Bellor, Del Rey Oaks, 22 years service, membership chairman; Jan Parks, Pacific Grove, 1945-46 and again 1948-67 parliamentarian.

Toepel explained that those wanting to join the local Navy Unit must become members of the WAVES National Corporation and must have served at least 90 days and received an honorable discharge. Further requirements for the unit will be a name and by-laws which comply with those of the national organization.

SOROPTIMIST ANNOUNCE ANNUAL NURSING ASSISTANT AWARDS

Administrators and staff personnel from six of the peninsula's finest convalescent hospitals and some 70 Soroptimist members and their guests attended the Soroptimist International of the Monterey Peninsula Third Annual Nursing Assistant Awards April 8, at a luncheon meeting held at the Hilton Inn in Monterey.

Each of the competing convalescent hospitals had chosen one of their aides to represent them in the annual event. A panel of five judges, most of whom were Soroptimists except Walter McCloud, Carmel Rotarian, who was the sole male member of panel, interviewed the candidates in March and following the guidelines of the program, selected one of the six as the first-place winner. The program allows for a tie for second place and the panel of judges found two candidates who did tie for that award. The nurses assistants, facilities and actual awards presented were as follows:

First Place, Sarah McLendon, total cash award $475, Monterey Pines Skilled Nursing Facility; Second-place tie, Lynn Beard, total cash award $225, Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital; Second-place tie, Mary Acezedo, total cash award $225, Driftwood Convalescent Hospital.

Other candidates receiving $75 cash awards were: Iris Rivera, Carmel Convalescent Hospital; Sara Ellis, Pacific Grove Convalescent Hospital, Felicitas Laskowski, Monterey Convalescent Hospital.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE AWARDS $1,000 IN PRIZES

The winners of the French contest sponsored by the Alliance Francaise de la Peninsule de Monterey received their awards April 13 at a reception held at the home of Professor and Mrs. Gilles Cantin of Monterey.

The examination took place at the Monterey Institute of International Studies Feb. 22. Twenty-six students from local schools entered the contest in the following categories: Category A, for college and university students; Category B, for high school students having more than three years of French; Category C, for high school students with less than three years of French.

The Scholarship Committee consisted of Dr. Danielle Chavy-Cooper, Mr. Auguste Armanasco, Mrs. Harry Peterson and Dr. Isabelle Armitage under the direction of Mrs. Gilles Cantin.

The top winners in each of the three categories are: Cat. A: Cathy Nelson of MIIS, $300. Cat. B: Huyn Chung of Finland, a student at RLS, $300. Cat. C: Leonard Nevarez of the Presidio of Monterey, a student at RLS, $200.

Other prizes were awarded to: Kim Bowden of Carmel, a student at Carmel High School, $50; Anne-Marie di Stefano of Carmel, a student at Carmel High, $50; Aimee Schut of Carmel, a student at Carmel High, $25; Andrea Anderson of Monterey, a student at Santa Catalina, $25; Francine Thatcher of Pacific Grove, a student at RLS, $25; Robert Runyon of Fort Ord, a student at Seaside High, $25.

Books and records were also offered to: Dana Kirk of Carmel, a student at RLS; Mark Dauphine of Carmel, a student at RLS; Chris Mueller of Fort Ord, a student at Seaside High; and Anthony Lacques of Aptos High School.

Congratulations to the students and their teachers.

BUSINESS BEAT BY NANCY HILLS

Another election story

LOOK OUT! Here comes another election story. Thought it was done, I'll bet.

Well, I think this column has been pretty quiet about the whole thing, primarily because it's not a political forum. However, what the business community wants and needs from the new city government is pertinent to business here in town.

I don't think it's any secret that the Carmel business community predominantly supported Clint Eastwood for mayor and Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer for city council.

Now that it is a fait accompli, what do some of the business people expect to happen? What are they looking for from this "new" council?

To find out, I did another of those highly unscientific surveys and asked people who showed a preference for the three candidates who were elected. Some were chosen for their position in the community and some were chosen because I could remember they had Eastwood campaign paraphernalia in their shop windows. As I said, not exactly scientific or unbiased.

My first victim was Carla Throgmorton, owner of Fiori clothing store in Carmel Plaza. Throgmorton said her interest in the election was "not only as a business owner, but as a resident."

"I am concerned as a resident about what happens to places like the beach and the things that make this a decent place to live."

With Eastwood a resident and business man, Throgmorton believed, "we will have the best of both worlds. He can unite both the business and residential community."

"I think Eastwood wants to let people be. With so much of a negative atmosphere and so many restrictions on business as well as residents, it was such a struggle."

"What I also want is common sense and a feeling of equality for everyone — and I believe he has that. I can't believe that he is strictly pro-business."

"What I really hated the most about what happened in the past is the people in office did not see the town for what it was. I think they really thought they were preserving Carmel as it was in the 1920s."

• Art gallery owner and long-time resident of the peninsula, Betty Jo Cost of James Peter Cost Gallery, said she saw Eastwood as a "problem solver."

"Problems have not been solved in the past but created — not only under Townsend but with administrations from before."

"After 30 years of doing business in Carmel, we still had an anti-business and anti-resident attitude to fight."

BETTY JO COST

Parking is an important issue, Cost said. She objected to the elimination of two parking spaces in front of Cottage Row on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue when the building was constructed over the sidewalk, the loss of a parking space on Dolores Street and two spaces in front of Piccadilly Park.

As for changing the zoning, Cost said she believes Carmel "should stay as it is."

"I'd be really sorry to lose Carmel. I'm already sorry to see it get away from the specialty shops it had in the past," she said.

She added she would like to see the moratorium lifted on art galleries.

"It's better to have an art gallery than T-shirt shops," she observed.

The former council, Cost said, "truly brought this on themselves through their attitude and lack of cooperation."

• Another enthusiast of Eastwood, Laiolo and Fischer's candidacy was Howard "Bud" Allen, owner of It's Bud's Pub on Lincoln Street and former owner of La Playa Hotel. Of course, if you don't know who the charming and bon vivant Allen is, you really aren't "in the know" here in Carmel.

Allen said one of the greatest objections he had to the former administration was "mismanagement of business. The city is a big business and they didn't handle it well."

The division of the Gamble Estate into large lots was a mistake, Allen said.

CARLA THROGMORTON

"What happens then, is it's necessary to build large homes in a price bracket only rich people can buy. Then there is the loss of the bohemian (types)."

The little homes and interesting hideaways generates "a feel" that draws these people, who are the mainstay of an artist community, Allen feels.

"I think there should be a land use variance in the residential area so we can take care of low-income housing," he added.

The "commercial scene," Allen said, "is incredible — it's becoming another Rodeo Drive."

Allen said he would like to see the general plan reviewed, but not necessarily changed.

"I think some poor decisions were made. We are losing our local flavor," he said.

Allen said he would also like to see "more thought" go into expenditures within the budget.

• Matt Little has had quite a bit of experience working with the city trying to get permission to rebuild his family's Carmel Sands Motel complex on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue. Little is also president of the Carmel Property Owners Association and owner of Carmel Insurance Agency.

"I'm excited about having a 'people's candidate' and that includes the two council candidates."

"So many people came out to vote and these people (the three winners) really captured the majority."

Little felt the overwhelming victory indicates a consensus of opinion. He can now "visualize a group of concerned citizens working together as a group to solve the problems of parking and water."

"I also see the business licensees having to make hard and important decisions in regards to water use, the numbers of employees to have and where to park."

"By working together toward agreed solutions, the residents and business licensees will earn marked respect."

As the council meetings and city business get under way, Little believes Eastwood's leadership abilities will "really begin to show."

A review of the general plan may be in order, Little said, though he doesn't anticipate a lot of changes.

"Everyone should be concerned with zoning. I would like the zoning laws to represent what the people want."

In all, Little said he was excited that "we are all going to work together again toward common goals within the community."

• Joan De Mers is looking forward to an interesting year as president of the Carmel Business Association and is enthusiastic about the new city government. De Mers is a personal banking officer with Wells Fargo Bank in Carmel.

"The biggest thing that the board and members of the CBA is looking forward to is an end to the factious rivalry between the business community and residents that members of the former council fostered."

"The outgoing administration would always say that there

...with Heathcliff's Blue Ribbon Cat Litter

ABSORBS MORE. Heathcliff's Blue Ribbon Cat Litter is made with diatomaceous earth, not ordinary clay. This natural substance absorbs 1½ times its weight in liquid. That's about twice as much as the competition.

ODOR CONTROL. Absorb 4+ is a time-released odor-controlling ingredient. And it's a part of the Heathcliff formula. Not a perfume, absorb 4+ is an effective odor-control system that is activated by moisture and agitation. The more it's needed the more it works.

DUST CONTROL. Heathcliff's Blue Ribbon Cat Litter is practically dust-free. No billowing clouds of dust when you fill the litter tray. And you won't find dusty kitty prints on the furniture.

EASY CLEAN-UP. Heathcliff's won't cake up, even when wet. No more chipping out the cement chunks on clean-up day. Heathcliff's slides easily out of the tray, leaving it clean, easy to rinse and refill.

OBITUARIES

Alan H. Westervelt

Private cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Alan Huntington Westervelt of Carmel who died April 1 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 86.

Born May 14, 1899 in Montclair, N.J., he moved to Santa Monica in 1911. He graduated from Princeton University in 1923 and in 1932 married Elizabeth Cowles. They lived in Southern California except during the war years and moved to Carmel Valley 10 years ago. He was with Pacific Telephone in Southern California for more than 40 years.

He served briefly in World War I, and in World War II was a lieutenant colonel. He was responsible for restoring postal, telephone and telegraph communications in Cherbourg and Paris, and also served two years in Berlin, where he was the American representative to the Four Powers council involving the French, British, Soviets and Americans.

Besides his wife Elizabeth he is survived by a daughter, Anne Westervelt Machen of Encinitas; son, Alan Jr. of Riverside; sister, Mrs. Richard Lowry of Tiburon and four grandchildren.

At his request, no services will take place. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

former businessman and Carmel resident for more than 50 years, who died April 4 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital. He was 93.

Born Dec. 19, 1892 in Arahova, Greece, he moved to Australia in 1907 and emigrated to the United States in 1922. He operated Bishop's Cafe at San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue in Carmel from 1934 to 1952.

After his retirement, he took a trip around the world. He was a member of the Rosicrucian Order of San Jose and sang many years in the Carmel Bach Festival.

He was also a member of the International Students Committee at Monterey Peninsula College and extended hospitality to international students.

Scattering of ashes at sea was scheduled with the Paul Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

Nicholas L. Aston

Funeral services took place April 7 in El Estero Chapel at the Mission Mortuary, followed by cremation April 8, for Nicholas Lewis Aston who died April 3 at Community Hospital. He was 92.

Born Sept. 19, 1893 in New York City, he was employed by the Prudential Life Insurance Co. in Oakland for 20 years before his retirement.

He built homes in Carmel and Lake Tahoe, and divided his time between them over the past 25 years. His wife, Eulalia, known as Peggy, died in 1981.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Vedanta Society, 2455 Bowditch St., Berkeley, California 94704.

Robin H. O'Connor

Graveside services took place April 7 at the San Gabriel Cemetery in San Gabriel for Robin Holland O'Connor, a Carmel Valley resident for the past five years, who died April 6 at Community Hospital. She was 74.

Born Jan. 5, 1912 in Washington, D.C., she lived in Pasadena before moving to Carmel Valley Manor in 1981.

She was a member of the Casa Abrego Club in Monterey and St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley.

Survivors include two daughters, Mary Hauser of San Francisco and Robin DeWitt of Arcadia. Her husband, John, died in 1964.

William G. Bishop

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for William George Bishop, a former businessman and Carmel resident for more than 50 years, who died April 4 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital. He was 93.

Born Dec. 19, 1892 in Arahova, Greece, he moved to Australia in 1907 and emigrated to the United States in 1922. He operated Bishop's Cafe at San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue in Carmel from 1934 to 1952.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

A study by the placement firm of Challenger, Gray and Christmas found that many companies are actively seeking older workers. Their survey of how long it takes unemployed workers to find a new job concluded that the 50-and-older group averaged less time landing a new job last year than did younger job-seekers.

If you're disabled and have a difficult time locating products tailored to your physical limitation, you might find an answer from the National Rehabilitation Information Center in Washington, D.C. They maintain a computerized listing of 12,000 products designed for the disabled. Their toll-free phone number is 1-800-346-2742. There is a $10 charge for a customized list of products. The list will include products descriptions, prices and names and addresses of manufacturers.

City-county meeting is postponed

THE BI-MONTHLY discussion session between the Carmel City Council and Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser-Kauffman has been postponed.

The session had been tentatively scheduled for Friday, but was delayed until the newly-elected council has an opportunity to first meet together.

The first regularly scheduled meeting of the city council is May 6. A session with Strasser Kauffman probably will be held later in May or early June.

Supervisors face several key land use issues

Wilson delay hearings on his bill until analyses are completed.

Strasser Kauffman has called a public meeting of the Big Sur community to discuss the senator's bill from 10 a.m. until noon Thursday, April 24 at the Big Sur Grange Hall.

There is no doubt where the Friends of the Big Sur Coast stand; that group has issued a statement calling Wilson the "political opportunist of the year."

In the statement, Chairman Jim Jossoff pointed out that Wilson opposed past attempts at federalization of Big Sur.

"He's already running for the 1988 election," said Jossoff of Wilson. "He introduced this bill to capture what he thinks of as the environmental vote and which he apparently thinks he needs."

Jossoff expressed fears that federalization of Big Sur could lead to commercialization such as in Yosemite.

Wilson's bill basically:

- Places Big Sur under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture. A paid "Big Sur Coast Trust" would be established to raise funds for land acquisition.

- Another nine-member advisory board would be established to assist the secretary's office in making decisions governing the federal lands in Big Sur.

- Gives the secretary the authority to condemn public lands in the event that development-controlling policies in the LUP are "weakened" by a shift in local county politics.

- Provides for $500,000 in seed money to implement the program.

Eventually Strasser Kauffman is expected to ask the entire Monterey County Board of Supervisors to take a stand on Wilson's bill.

However, she will remain non-committal until after the April 24 town hall meeting.

"This federal legislation was dropped on us out of the blue — it warrants a detailed response back to the senator," she said.

"The Big Sur area is too fragile and its citizenry too dedicated for me to take a position on this critical proposal without consulting them first."

ANOTHER ISSUE — perhaps just as controversial and complex — is what supervisors plan to do about development on the Odello East Ranch.

SEN. PETE Wilson is finding tough going in his bid to convince Big Sur residents and county officials to support his bill. (Holly McFarland photo.)

The Coastal Commission currently is under court order to develop information that will support its decision to allow up to 162 units, a restaurant and farmer's market on the property, east side of Highway 1 about one-half mile south of Rio Road.

The courts have agreed with the city of Carmel that the Coastal Commission did not have enough basis of fact to support inclusion of the development in the land use plan.

The Coastal Commission now can revise its findings and appeal the case back to the courts; or send the LUP to the county for further study.

But no matter what the Coastal Commission decides, Strasser Kauffman insists that the Odello property must be included within the boundaries of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

If included in the master plan and its allocation system, the Odello development will have to compete with other projects in the Valley for permission to build.

That means that even if the Odello

PROTECTING THE fragile Big Sur region is the key goal of the recently-adopted Big Sur development is approved by supervisors, the family could build no more than 20 units annually.

Strasser Kauffman said that the Odellos "will never be able to justify the traffic impact" of their development without being included in the master plan.

The Odellos could argue that their project will not increase traffic as long as it is approved over another development in the Valley, Strasser Kauffman reasons.

Simply put, the Odello traffic will replace the traffic that could have been generated by another Valley project.

However, if the Odellos are not included in the master plan, their project's traffic would be in addition to the traffic generated by other developments in the Valley.

Strasser Kauffman indicated that it would be impossible for the county to approve the Odello development on the traffic issue unless the project is incorporated in the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Bruna Odello is expected to meet with Strasser Kauffman Friday, April 18 to discuss project specifics such as actual number of units and size of the restaurant.

OF COURSE, including the Odello development in the master plan is dependent on court approval of the plan.

The consultant, Gloria Root and Associates, currently is running a month late on delivering the master plan draft environmental impact report to the county, Strasser Kauffman said.

The delay is blamed on the traffic circulation study, which she said is "much more complicated than anticipated."

The draft EIR is expected to be available for public review by early June.

However, Strasser Kauffman indicated that she still intends for supervisors to adopt the master plan and accompanying EIR by the end of the year.

The county then will re-submit the master plan and EIR to Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver for his approval.

It was Silver, acting on lawsuits filed by the city of Carmel, who declared a moratorium on discretionary building permits in the Valley and ordered the county to rework the master plan and EIR to more adequately protect the environment and address such issues as water and traffic.

Development at Mission Ranch is another issue supervisors may have to face, although it appears even more unlikely as time goes by.

The city is interested in annexing and perhaps even buying the Mission Ranch site, just outside the municipal limits southwest of Carmel Mission.

The Carmel Area Land Use Plan includes permissive zoning for up to 62 units on the approximately 20-acre site. Mission Ranch

Land Use Plan. Now the county must begin its implementing ordinances and cope with Corp. has submitted development plans for the property.

Judging from her comments, it is doubtful that Mission Ranch Corp. will have a supporter in Strasser Kauffman for their density.

"I don't see building Mission Ranch out as a little city or a little suburb," Strasser Kauffman said.

She also supports the city's battle to save as much wetlands as possible. The city seeks to have 11.25 acres declared protected wetlands while Mission Ranch Corp. wants to set aside just 4.68 acres.

"I will certainly argue for the broadest protection," Strasser Kauffman said.

County rezoning of the property for development — approved prior to Strasser Kauffman's term — currently is before the courts as the result of a lawsuit filed by the City of Carmel.

WHAT TO do about development at Carmel Point is another issue pending before the county.

The catalyst is the Stewart property, which is planned for eight units on lots of approximately 4,500 sq. ft. each.

Strasser Kauffman believes the county must take a hard look at development there to ensure that the homes are clustered and kept within the county height limits.

However, she disavows any attempt to decrease the density since the property has legal lots of record.

A site that may be subdivided in the future is the Jean Arthur property, which is four legal lots of record but currently has just one house, she said.

Sen. Pete Wilson's proposal to federalize Big Sur. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Another concern expressed by Strasser Kauffman is development on Lobos Ridge, southeast of The Crossroads shopping center.

Two minor subdivisions have been approved for that hill and Strasser Kauffman wants to ensure that in the future the homes are at least screened from public view.

Supervisors anticipate more lengthy and controversial hearings on Point Lobos Ranch, the site proposed for two 120-unit hotels, a 500-seat convention center, residences, restaurants and equestrian center.

Developer Ted Richter has undertaken traffic and water studies, but there is no word when the project will be back to the county for public hearings.

Concerning a separate development, supervisors eventually will have to act on the proposed subdivision at Rancho San Carlos, the 20,000-acre spread in the hills south of Carmel Valley Road stretching practically from Highway 1 to the village.

Originally, developer Arthur Oppenheimer wanted to develop a 3,800-resident village in the bowl area off Robinson Canyon Road.

The county drastically reduced the density for the ranch to one unit per 160 acres, which would give Oppenheimer just about 125 homes.

The zoning for the property is now in the courts.

Development by a public agency also is on the drawing board.

The Monterey County Housing Authority has plans for an approximately 200-unit senior citizen housing project at Carmel Valley Overview, north side of Carmel Valley Road about six miles east of Highway 1.

SUPERVISOR KARIN Strasser Kauffman is concerned about development in the hills overlooking the mouth of Carmel Valley. Development controls in the Carmel Area was animosity between residents and business. In fact, if there was any rift it was between the administration and the business community, not the residents and business."

Local Coastal Program planning area is expected to be addressed by Strasser Kauffman in the coming months. (Holly McFarland photo.)

De Mers said she believed the CBA should again ask for funding from the city, funds that were taken away by the former council.

"I believe that the CBA should, in fact, be going before the city council every year and ask for funding whether we receive it or not."

The business community, De Mers said, does not control the residents but is "subordinated to the residential interests. It is a residential community and I think business has worked very hard to keep it that."

The CBA, she feels, saves the city money by answering inquiries from potential residents and tourists all over the world about Carmel. Those calls and questions are referred to the CBA, De Mers said.

"If the CBA didn't exist, the city would probably have to give out more money than any grant for staffing and postage" just to deal with the requests for information that come in every day, she added.

Cooperation is the primary aim of the businesses, De Mers said, not gaining control of the city.

"I don't think that anyone in the business community is looking for Clint Eastwood to 'make their day'."

DIANE SWAYNE

(forgive me, it was part of quote so I had to write it.)

People working in Carmel, De Mers said, cherish and love the community and want it to stay as beautiful as it can. From the city, they are looking for "a positive atmosphere of cooperation and harmony which has not existed in the past."

"In fact, I've gone back through CBA files and looked at the years of correspondence. Every past CBA president has tried to assure the mayor (Townsend) of the (CBA's) spirit of cooperation and harmony."

Many, many residents, De Mers said, are looking for and hoping for a change in attitude or a change in the planning commission.

"While many business people or residents have never had to appeal before the city council, they do see the planning commission and city council in the same mind.

"If you are mistreated by someone sitting up there representing the city, you are mistreated by the city, so I would say one of the things that led to the demise of the administration was the way things were handled by the planning commission and the pervasive rudeness that they perpetuated on so many people. And I speak from personal experience."

Leadership is something else De Mers said she is looking for. "I feel because of her (Townsend's) lack of leadership the meetings went on and on," she said. De Mers believes that is one of the reasons the meetings were so badly attended.

"I think the residents will be better informed and will attend if better leadership is demonstrated."

"Clint ran a very positive campaign that ended up appealing to the residents. The former administration had a very, very bitter and negative attitude which showed in their television interviews," De Mers said.

• Don Bowen of Carmel Business Sales is an agent in many a sale of businesses in Carmel and the surrounding area.

What Bowen said he would like "some courtesy in the city — not necessarily just city hall because city hall has always been very courteous to me — but in things like the Business License and Code Review Board and other committees."

"I would like to see a common sense applied. For instance, this is a beautiful, lovely city and a couple of tables outside a restaurant, if there is room, is wonderful. There is nothing more beautiful or relaxing than an outdoor restaurant."

Bowen said one thing he would really like to see a "streamlining of transfers of business licenses. It's ridiculous that it takes two months for a business license transfer in the Ocean Avenue corridor."

• Linda Garcia of The Garcia Gallery on Ocean Avenue said the parking problem was her number one priority for the new council to take care of.

"So many people come in here, say 'What time is it?' and that they have to go move their car."

Public restrooms are important, too, she added.

Garcia said she expects a "positive attitude toward tourism and business people."

endorsement of a new Carmel River Dam, the three council majority promises to join the special assessment district to study the dam and its costs.

By joining the assessment district, the council will be giving Carmel residents an opportunity to vote on the dam, expected in Nov. 1987. Also, by joining, the council commits the city to abiding by the decision of the whole district. For example, Carmel could vote against the dam and still have to help pay for it if the areawide vote is in support of the facility.

SPANISH BAY

Settlement of this lawsuit is a foregone conclusion, unless litigation partner Monterey chooses to continue.

Eastwood will talk Pebble Beach Co. President Tom Oliver into improvements to Holman Highway by the hospital and convince the company to help develop an alternate access road to the hospital.

If talks with Oliver fail, don't be surprised if Eastwood calls old friend Marvin Davis, owner of Pebble Beach Co., for a little back room politicking.

ODELLO DEVELOPMENT

Another suit destined for the trash can, although it's fairly well settled now.

DON'T EXPECT any more court challenges, even if supervisors fail to officially include the Odello property in the Carmel Valley Master Plan planning area.

Besides, Bruna Odello is a big fan of Eastwood and supported him from the beginning of the campaign.

SECOND KITCHENS

Expect legalization. The real battle will be over rent control. At present, the three council-majority disapproves of rent control but after some lobbying from those living in $400 per month one-room units, perhaps a change of heart will be forthcoming.

BUSINESS BEAT BY NANCY HILLS

"I feel for the residents because of all the people here on the weekends and summers, but you have to accommodate them. Instead of having this negative attitude, we have to deal with all these visitors."

• Cooperation — there's that word again — is what Yvonne Campbell, owner of Ocean Avenue Realty is looking for and expecting.

"If I want to paint my building, I want to be able to have a quick answer. I want to be able to have a reasonable display in my window, one that is attractive, not just one picture.

"The main thing is understanding, be willing to listen," she said.

"I'm not pro-growth but we just cannot stand still or go backward. We can do judicious growth," Campbell said.

The past council was "too restrictive," she added. If there is a problem with sightseers at city council meetings then they should be confined to residents and people with business before the council.

• "Thrilled" was the operative word about the election results for Diane Swayne, manager of Hilda of Iceland on Ocean Avenue.

"What Mr. Eastwood promised in the campaign is a more congenial working relationship between business and the city.

As a resident, I also want to see an ease of the traffic flow and a relaxing of parking tickets for residents and merchants in town. We've been penalized too long for not having a place to park."

Easing of the process for permits is another important priority for Swayne.

"As a merchant, I've spent an enormous amount of money trying to get simple, basic needs like signs, an awning and the building painted."

It took her, she said, seven months to get an awning approved.

Cancer prevention addressed

Cancer specialist Roger Shiffman will lead a free community health forum on cancer prevention at 9 a.m. Saturday, April 19 in the main conference room at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Shiffman will discuss the relationship between dietary choices and certain types of cancer, as well as the role of tobacco and alcohol in cancer prevention. He will be assisted by Community Hospital Dietician Jennifer Kwong. A question and answer session will follow the presentation.

Seating is limited. For details, call 625-4505.

KIDS' BEAT BY CAROLE COLTER

Racing to success

Despite the drizzly, rather cool day the Race of a New Generation was well attended on Saturday, April 5 by remote control car contestants and fans.

The Carmel Middle School was the setting for this pilot program organized by the Carmel Youth Center's Youth Fundraising committee headed by team captain Robert Connell and junior leader Tao King. Robert and Tao, along with their teammates have found a way to not only make money for their group, but have fun doing it! Treasurer Jason Moore found the day's activities especially rewarding when profits soared to a lucrative $180.17, all of which goes into a special account set aside for youth team activities only.

Our local Thinker Toys were behind the kids all day with their knowledge and support. In addition, they generously sponsored gift certificates to winners Jeff Hamby, Alex Kamimori, and Jim Cain. Our congratulations to you speedsters.

Special praise should go to our adult race experts Jimmy Meserve and Chuck August who aided in the success of this race by keeping contestants on the go and informed as the day progressed to its happy conclusion.

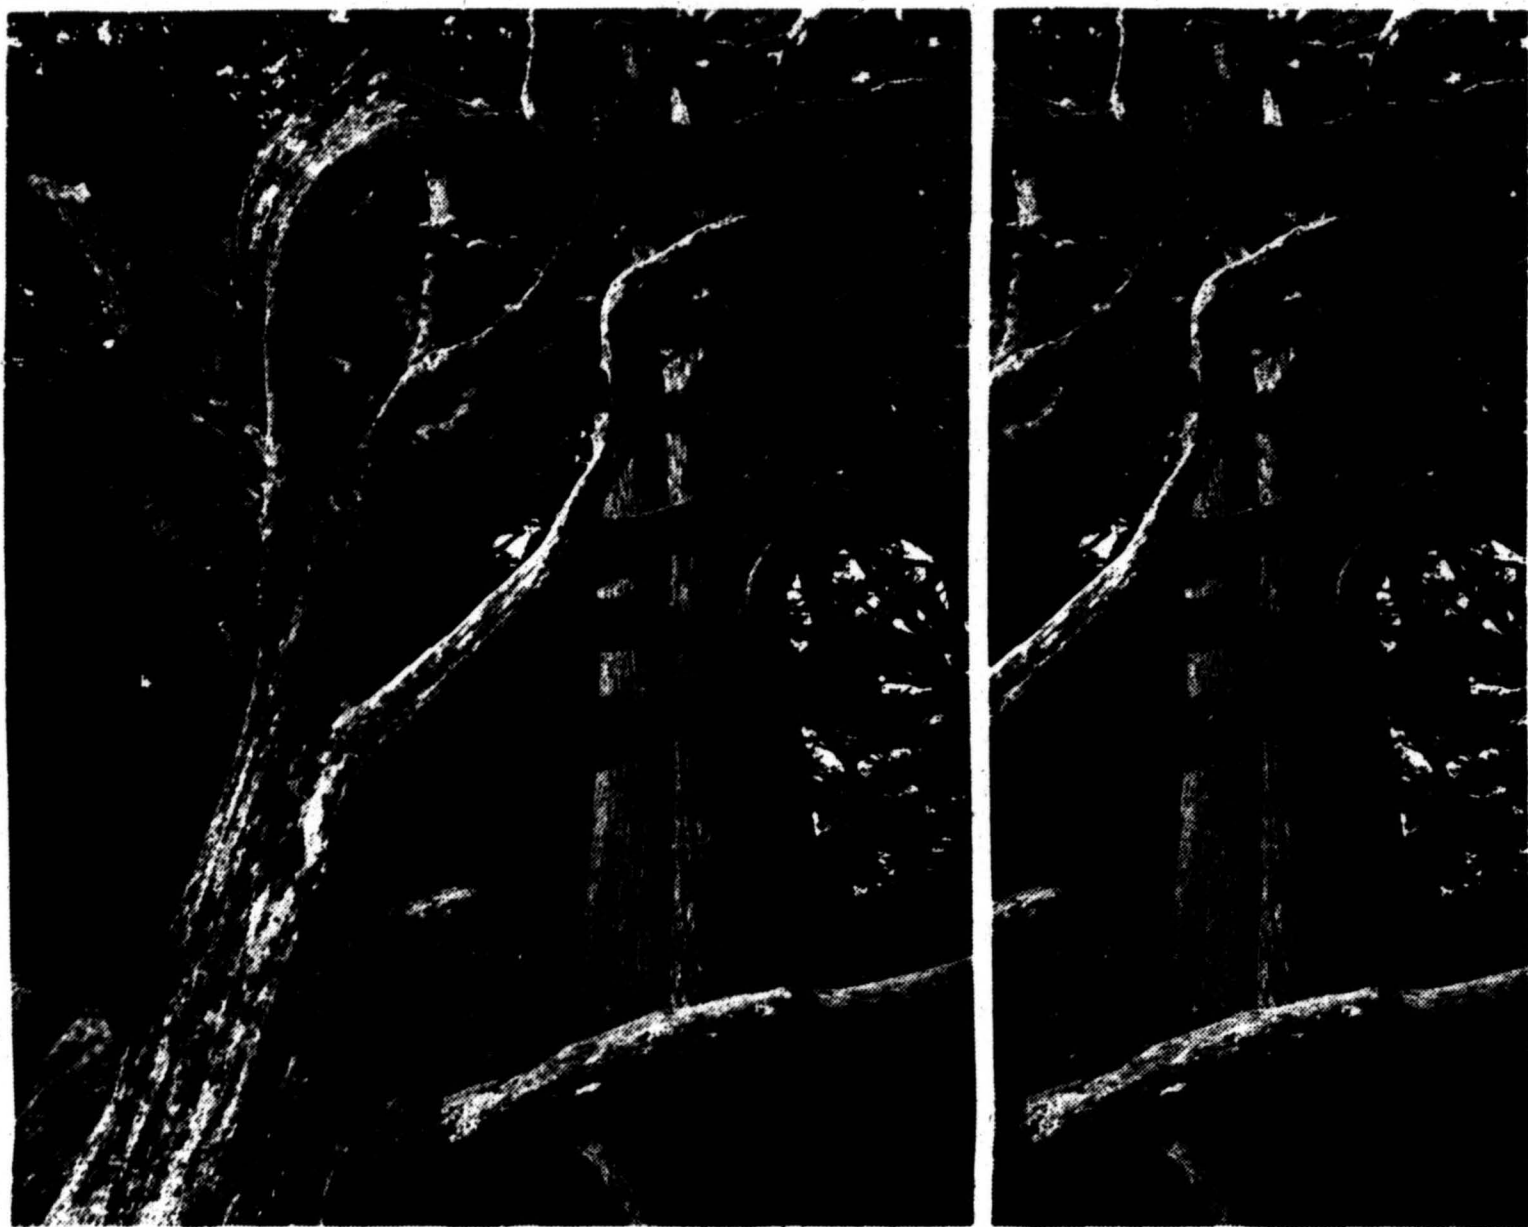

Contestants and fans alike warmed to our trailer boss, Cathleen Connell and her crew of culinary entrepreneurs who served hot dogs, coffee, candy and other assorted tummy-filling delights from one of our famous Bingmobile trailers.

The best news of all is that since this R/C Race was so successful...we plan more events in the not-so-distant future! Keep your eyes peeled to this column for details.

CALIFORNIA HISTORY IS intermingled with characters both real and fictional in The Impostors of Monterey by Louis C. Moore of Carmel Valley. The author used the Spanish colonizing of the Monterey Bay area as the springboard for what he calls a "romantic novel" about the era. Photographs used in the book include this circa 1885 view of Carmel Mission. (Photograph from the Pat M. Hathaway collection.)

Historical novel recalls latter-day peninsulans

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A PASSION for history prodded Louis C. Moore of Carmel Valley to add further dash to the colorful lives of those who built Spanish-ruled California.

A resident of Del Mesa Carmel and a three-times a week tennis player, Moore, 75, is author of The Impostors of Monterey. His book, completed in 1985 after being reworked over a period of years, is replete with the latter-day jackanapes, merchants and adventurers whose stories have lent their names to many local streets and structures.

Just don't expect Moore's book to read like a history text.

"It's a historical novel in the same genre as Memoirs of Hadrian or ... and Ladies of the Club. Both combine history and romance," explained Moore.

An avowed history buff, Moore used his knowledge of Old California as the starting point for this novel that encompasses the years from the Spanish discovery of Monterey Bay by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo to the time of Mexico's relinquishing of California in 1848.

"I've taken the actual facts, the year of the earthquakes that shut down the missions, for example, and used them in the book," he said.

The two impostors referred to in the title are factual figures.

Moore described the first impostor, Hypolyte Bouchard, as "a Frenchman working for the Argentinians who came to Monterey in the guise of an English traveller." The second impostor is One-Eyed Charley Parkhurst, a rip-roaring, real-life stagecoach driver who was ultimately laid to rest in Watsonville.

"This is the most exciting time in California history," Moore stated. "This was a wilderness that was gradually encroached upon by civilization. The few Christians who were here were so isolated from the world they were living in a vacuum."

It is not only scholarship that enabled Moore to speak so intimately of these figures from California's early days. His wife of 52 years, Eduarda Somavia Moore, is the descendent of Jose Arguello, the Spanish military commander of the port of San Francisco.

Eduarda Moore's relatives fled Colonial Monterey to Salinas in 1818, when Hypolyte Bouchard — operating under the orders of the government of Argentina, attempted to force the colonials to renounce King Ferdinand the Seventh of Spain.

"I referred to my wife's relatives' archives.

It seems they were involved in the destruction of Monterey. They were loyal Spaniards," Moore noted.

In The Impostors of Monterey, a whiskey-infused character named Girona summarized

Homemade designs rule at Carmel Kite Festival

IN A SPRING ritual conducted annually since 1931, children have tested their homemade kites during the Carmel Kite Festival, competing for the fun of it and for such prizes as the Willis White (Best Design) Trophy.

The annual kite festival returns Saturday, April 19. Perhaps the most significant change in this get-together of kite enthusiasts is that there are now categories for adults and even seniors (age 65 and up).

The action is set to begin with 1 p.m. registration on Carmel Beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue. Rules are few but firm.

1. All kites must be homemade. No commercial kites will be allowed.
2. Each kite entered must fly to be eligible for prizes.
3. Each kite may be entered in one age group only.

4. Kites entered in any previous year will not qualify for entry again this year.

5. Kites capable of carrying passengers aloft will not be permitted.

The festival was launched Feb. 21, 1931 by the Rev. Willis G. White, who had previously founded similar events in San Diego and Bakersfield. From Sunset School, in a body, children marched with their kites to "the grazing country in Hatton Fields."

Leading the 1931 parade was Town Marshal Gus Englund, followed by Mayor Herbert Heron, all of the other members of the city council and school trustees.

This, the 55th annual Carmel Kite Festival, is co-sponsored by the Carmel Lions Club, City of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District.

The contest begins with youngest age group first. Prizes in the respective age categories will be awarded for highest flying, best workmanship and prettiest kite. Major prizes are the Willis White Trophy Award for best design, the Ernest Calley Trophy Award for grand champion kite and the Charles L. Dawson Trophy Award for best kite produced by an entrant age 12 or younger with no adult help.

ing from Spain's weakening grasp. In November, 1818 marauders — los piratas they've been called ever since — commanded by an Insurgente named Hypolyte Bouchard entered our bay. He demanded that Governor Sola — well-intentioned but weak and unprepared — renounce the king and declare Alta California independent under the banner of the new Republic of Buenos Aires."

The author interweaves a romantic plotline into The Impostors of Monterey by telling of the betrothal of Concepcion Arguello in 1806 to the Russian-born Nikolai Rezanov.

According to Moore, historians to this day disagree as to whether Rezanov, an envoy of

Locals given first pick for Bach Festival tickets

SINGLE TICKETS for the 49th annual Carmel Bach Festival, scheduled for July 14 through Aug. 3, will be available to Monterey Peninsula residents for one week only, prior to the general sale to the public.

From Monday, April 28 through Friday, May 2, the festival office, room 11 in Sunset Center at San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel, will be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. for this special ticket sale.

The 49th season of the festival will acknowledge Mendelssohn, the 19th century reviver of Bach's work, by playing his violin concerto on opening night as well as the Italian Symphony and some of his chamber music on other nights.

Other highlights will be The Passion According to St. John, Cantatas 8, 55 and 140, a Mozart piano concerto, and Mozart's opera, The Marriage of Figaro, which will be staged.

Thursday night will feature the Colorado String Quartet in a program of Mendelssohn, Mozart and Beethoven. The Carmel Mission Basilica concert will be entitled, "The Grandeur That was Rome: Music from the Eternal City."

Soloists will include Sergiu Luca, Rosemary Waller, Mark Volkert, violin; Janina Fialkowska, piano; Patricia Schuman, Ruth Ann Swenson, soprano; Janice Taylor, mezzo-soprano; Karl Markus, Gregory Wait, tenor; Douglas Lawrence, Jacob Will, bass; Ken Ahrens, organ.

Ticket prices for the concerts at Sunset Theater are $13, $15 and $17. Recitals are conducted at the Sunset Center, All Saints' Church in Carmel and Bethlehem Lutheran Church, in Monterey. Recital tickets are $5.

For further information call 624-1521 or write P.O. Box 575, Carmel, CA 93921.

Youngsters sample classics through county symphony

SOME 4,000 fourth and fifth-graders from throughout Monterey County are expected to attend two youth concerts presented by the Monterey County Symphony.

Concerts, open only to students and symphony sponsors, are scheduled Wednesday, April 23 at Sherwood Hall in Salinas and Thursday, April 24 at Sunset Theater in Carmel.

Music Director and Conductor Clark E. Suttle and the full Monterey County Symphony Orchestra will perform a variety of works by composers Rimsky-Korsakov, Gliere, Rossini, Strauss and Gounod. The featured work will be the 1812 Overture by Peter Tchaikovsky.

The Youth Concerts are the culmination of a series of in-school demonstrations that the Monterey County Symphony Association provides to all the county schools.

Small groups of musicians, usually numbering three or four to a group, travel to each of the participating schools and perform for the fourth and fifth-graders. The ensembles of musicians, including brass, string, woodwind and percussion, explain the basics of the individual sounds produced by their types of instrument and the history of the instrument. They play a variety of short pieces and use the music to tell stories, make dramatic sound effects and to illustrate the different musical styles.

Wildflowers blossom in P.G.

SPRING WILDFLOWERS both abundant and rare will be exhibited during the 25th annual wildflower show sponsored by the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

More than 500 species of Monterey County wildflowers have been assembled for the show, presented Friday through Sunday, April 18-20. Rare and endangered species are grown for the event to prevent their being taken in the wild. Others are collected from private lands and areas of local abundance.

The plants are arranged in family groups to highlight differences between similar species, such as the lupines, poppies and sunflowers.

Also a part of the show this year is an exhibit of 30 eight-by-10 color photographs taken to Beatrice Howitt. Howitt founded the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society.

She obtained a bachelor's degree in bacteriology from UC Berkeley in 1924 and a master's degree in protozoology the following year. During her career she made significant contributions in the research and control of poliomyelitis, encephalomyelitis, influenza and Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

Upon retirement she moved to the Monterey Peninsula where her work with plants began. She is co-author with John T. Howell of Vascular Plants of Monterey County. She is also author/photographer of Wildflowers of the Monterey Area.

Admission is free to the wildflower show, although donations to help support the museum will be accepted. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History is at Forest and Central avenues in Pacific Grove.

Fabric, fashion fair set at MPC

MONTEREY PENINSULA College will present its Third Annual Fabric and Fashion Fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 19, in the MPC Theatre and College Center.

This year's fair format will differ from that of the last two years by offering keynote speakers in the theater while workshop/demonstrations are being conducted in the College Center.

Also part of the fair this year will be a fashion show, more than 20 exhibitors, demonstrations and a remnant rummage sale.

Keynote speaker Phyllis Larsen, a home economist who has worked for Ghirardelli Chocolate Company for 20 years, will talk about "Being Creative With Chocolate" at 9 a.m. in the theater. She is responsible for developing all the recipes on Ghirardelli Chocolate packages and recipe leaflets and is the author of the Ghirardelli Original Chocolate Cookbook.

Also at 9 a.m. in the College Center, Linda Carol of the Treasure Chest in Carmel will discuss "Jewelry Fashion Trends" and designer Rachael Clark will illustrate "Clothing for the Body and Soul."

Bobbie Carr, of the Fabric Carr, will talk about "Putting Couture in Your Wardrobe" at 10 a.m. in the theater. At the same time in the College Center, Terri Brazinsky, who has developed a private line called "Fashions For the Fuller Figure," will give a workshop entitled "Style is Not a Size." Also, designer Diane Ericson Frode will demonstrate "Contemporary Stenciling on Fabric."

From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., a variety of luncheon choices will be offered by local fundraising organizations in the College Center. Also in the center during lunch will be exhibitors, demonstrations, and a fabric rummage sale put on by the MPC Custom Dressmaking and Alterations Class.

In the theater from 1 to 2 p.m., the MPC Fashion Promotion Class taught by Linda Moore will put on a fashion show. All make-up, hairstyles, props and clothes will be done by the class.

At 2 p.m. Barbara Garvey, founder and president of Folkwear Patterns, will talk on the subject "Everything Old is New Again" in the theater. In the College Center, registered dietitian Janice Harrell will share "Recipes for Life: Diet Changes That Can Reduce Your Cancer Risk" and Charles Walton of Kidwell Paint Company will demonstrate "Old World Finishes" including marbelizing, gilding and glazing techniques.

Exhibits and more demonstrations will take place in the College Center between 3 and 4 p.m.

Registration for the MPC Fabric and Fashion Fair is $10 and may be paid in advance by contacting the MPC Life Science Office, 646-4125 or 646-4138, or paid at the MPC theater between 8 and 9 on the morning of the event.

A VENGEFUL AND impassioned Lady Kaede (Miko Harada) threatens the life of her brother-in-law Jiro (Jinpachi Nezu) in Ran, Akira Kurosawa's epic adaptation of

Akira Kurosawa's epic 'Ran' launches local film festival

THE MONTEREY Film Festival will be launched with the Thursday, April 17 screening of Akira Kurosawa's Ran at the Dream Theater in Monterey.

The Monterey Film Festival is scheduled to take place Feb. 5-8, 1987, at Monterey area theaters. Thursday's screening of Ran is designed as a benefit for the festival, which will embrace both American and foreign films, films shot on location on the Monterey Peninsula and productions starring local celebrities. This is the first county-wide endeavor to establish an annual film festival. A Japanese-themed reception will take place prior to the screening of Ran. The Dream Theater, located at Prescott and Lighthouse avenues in Monterey, will be transformed into a little Japan, with Asian food, entertainment and decor carrying out the theme. Peninsula designer Jerry Takigawa will unveil the logo design for the Monterey Film Festival.

The premiere is scheduled to take place 7 to 11 p.m. Seating is limited. Tickets are $35 per person, tax-deductible. For reservations or more information, call 372-6993.

Ran is Akira Kurosawa's 27th film. The title translates as "chaos" or "turmoil," and is Kurosawa's meditation on Shakespeare's King Lear.

Fame

The Robert Louis Stevenson Players will present the musical Fame at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 18-19, and 2 p.m. Sunday, April 20.

The musical was adapted from both the movie and television show, and will be performed in Keck Auditorium on the Stevenson campus in Pebble Beach. All seating is reserved, and tickets are $5. For reservations, call 649-5561.

Dear Brutus

Magic is afoot and dreams come alive in James M. Barrie's Dear Brutus, in which a cast of Britishers discover a wood where none existed.

The Staff Players Repertory Company will stage Dear Brutus at 8 p.m. Fridays through Sundays until May 4 at the Indoor Forest Theater. Tickets are $7 general, $5 for senior citizens and students. The theater is on Mountain View at Santa Rita in Carmel. Tickets: 624-1531.

E/R — Emergency Room

A stream of characters wreak havoc on the usually well-ordered routine at a hospital in E/R, Emergency Room, a play conceived by Ronald Berman, M.D. It is presented by The Western Stage.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, April 17-19 at the main stage of Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Tickets are $7.50 Sunday through Thursday, $8.50 Friday and Saturday. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Harvey

Mary Chase's comedy about a six-foot-tall invisible rabbit continues at The Western Stage in Salinas.

Harvey is a Pooka, a fairy spirit in animal form that is a wise but mischievous creature. Curtain time for Harvey is 8 p.m. Sunday, April 20 in the performing arts center at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Tickets are $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and $8.50 for Friday-Saturday performances. Reservations can be made through the Hartnell College box office, Center Stage Ticketing, or by calling 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Any Wednesday

False assumptions, mistaken identities and lots of balloons populate Any Wednesday, a comedy playing at The Studio Theatre Restaurant.

Any Wednesday features Dick Vreeland as a millionaire businessman, Nikki McKee as his hoodwinked wife, Sheryl Griggs as his mistress and John Houghton as the irate victim of his sharp practice.

Dinner is at 7 p.m. with an 8:30 p.m. curtain Thursdays through Saturdays at the dinner-theater on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel. Times are one hour earlier on Sundays. Dinner and show price is $24.50 per person. Tickets: 624-1661.

Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl

California's First Theatre, the oldest theater in the state, is the setting for this melodrama about the exploitation of a working woman in New York City.

Senior luncheon program seeks more volunteers

The Monterey County Food Bank, a service of the Alliance on Aging, needs volunteers for the Senior Citizen Brown Bag program. Help is needed to deliver brown bags to elderly persons living on the Monterey Peninsula who are unable to leave their homes.

The program was designed to supplement the food needs of low income elderly persons. However, due to handicap and disease many seniors are unable to participate. As a volunteer you can help bridge the gap by transporting brown bags to people in designated neighborhoods.

Local growers, packers and other food industries donate surplus and unmarketable produce and other food items to the Food Bank. This allows recovery of otherwise wasted food and assists those who need a supplement to their food needs. Volunteers at the warehouse cull and count the food to be delivered to 27 Brown Bag distribution sites throughout Monterey County.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Wit and charm and a big purple patch

CARMEL'S STAFF PLAYERS' current offering is a revival of J.M. Barrie's 1917 classic, Dear Brutus, a midsummer night's magical mystery tour into the world of might-have-been for nine people who have been invited to a country weekend by a mysterious, puckish host who has chosen them for a quality they all have in common.

Superficially different from each other — butler and haughty lady, failed artist and condescending wife, womanizer and faithful wife, idler and vixen — the guests spend Act I puzzling out the quality they share: every one of them believes that, given a second chance, their lives would be flawless and happy. Barrie's particular gift is to make his point about human nature in a simultaneously gentle and penetrating way, blending fantasy and reality to bring about the object lesson echoed in the play's title.

But though Dear Brutus is Barrie's acknowledged masterpiece, the script has a big purple patch that makes for problems in performance. Act I's skillful orchestration of the houseguests, as they build suspense about their absent host and quiz the cagey butler on the mysterious timing of their midsummer visit, gives way in Act II to a fantasy interlude — the second chance for which each has asked.

In the case of pairs of characters obviously at odds, this works well: the haughty aristocrat reveals a slavish relish for the entrepreneurial butler, and the philandering husband unwittingly philanders with his own wife. In the case of the failed artist and his bitter wife, Barrie leads us astray into a never-never-land cadenza that sorts ill with the rest of the action.

Conjuring a delightful might-have-been daughter for the childless Dearth and an empty, groveling existence for his haughty wife, Barrie ends up telling us a lot more about his own unresolved attitudes towards marriage, childhood, and growing up than he does about any of the characters involved.

Alan Smith is engaging in both of his roles as Dearth the drunkard and Dearth the delighted father of an impetuous, pretty daughter, and Vivian Nesbitt's Margaret is enchanting. But their scene in the magical wood spans two-thirds of Act II, while the other seven characters are disposed of quickly in the remaining third, and Barrie's elegiac longing to participate in the vivacity and optimism of extreme youth does not blend so gracefully with the rest of the play as it does in his legendary Peter Pan. Nor does Dearth's might-have-been personality balance off his everyday one, as those of the other characters do.

Still, Dear Brutus is a faithful revival of a play that has been called a classic masterpiece by people who ought to know one when they see one, and this production, directed by Marcia Gambrell Hovick, has a lot of charm and midnight magic to offer. The play is full of delightful, sly inversions that pinpoint the characters' lack of self-honesty and set them up for self-realization. (Caught kissing Mabel's husband, Joanna complains of Mabel, "She has spoilt it all. She has taken the innocence out of it.")

Gwyneth Hovick glides elegantly through the role of Joanna, the duplicitous homewrecker, and Ian Neumann's narcissistic rotter is impeccably self-serving and comic. Loel Shuler brings grace to the smaller role of Mrs. Coade, and James Goffard is just right as Coade, her lovable, idling husband.

James Brady's Matey the butler is full of social climbing vitality, and Renee Farjeon's fashionably spoken Lady Caroline ("You will weegret this," she states loftily) strikes the divine spark of nobility offended. Ann Mattingly's heartless Alice Dearth is particularly fine, with a voice that cuts like a scalpel when she takes her besodden husband to task, and Thomas R. Sanchez is perfect as Lob, the mysterious ageless imp of a host who talks to his flowers like little children and whose playfulness masks a keen eye for his guests' illusions.

The weak link in an otherwise uniformly strong cast is Randi Andrews' Mabel Purdie who, in Act I, fails to portray an emotional response to her husband's perversely proud open flirtation with Joanna. In Act II, with the roles of Mabel and Joanna reversed, we see how it ought to have been done, for Hovick, essentially replaying Andrews' part, conveys the effect well enough.

Sets for Dear Brutus, including a delightfully whimsical wood, were designed and painted by Carey Crockett, and the show is dressed by Loel Shuler with a keen eye for the contrast between a British country drawing room and a midsummer night's adventure in an enchanted wood.

ROUNDUP

Film focuses on operatic veterans

Tosca's Kiss, a 1984 film featuring the singers and musicians of the Casa Verdi in Milan, a home for retired performers from the Italian opera, was named one of the top 10 films of 1985 by the National Board of Review. The Monterey Peninsula Film Society will screen Tosca's Kiss Friday through Sunday, April 18-20.

It will be shown in Italian with subtitles at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, Monterey Institute of International Studies, 440 Van Buren St. in Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general, $3 students, $2.75 senior citizens and $2 for Monterey Peninsula Film Society members. For details, call 659-4795 between 5 p.m. and show time.

Squid festival entertainment sought

Organizers of the third annual Great Monterey Squid Festival are searching for musicians, jugglers, magicians and clowns. The festival will take place May 24 and 25 at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Interested entertainers should call Ben Goldman at 625-1229.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

The trouble with two-speed clocks

THE EXTENDED run of Amadeus (Revenge of Salieri?) trimmed MPC's Main Stage production of David Mamet's Revenge of the Space Pandas down to a one-weekend run. Yes, last weekend. If you didn't see it then, you missed it. And, that's too bad, especially if you were looking for a colorful, rowdy children's show with a couple of adult-sized satirical bits thrown in to catch the occasional interest of the attending grownups, the most interesting of which, for Carmelites, might be the reversal accomplished by the mere appearance of a famous film star.

This quirky piece of space fluff throws a big toy wrench into the tough guy-heavy issue mystique of prize winning playwright David Mamet, for Space Pandas only glances at the satire, focusing instead on the fluff.

Scene designer Carey Crockett has caught the mood and the level of the piece perfectly in outsized storybook sets that are sometimes made to move like life-size cartoons. Vivid and clever costumes designed by Gilbarre likewise make this production a delight to the eye, and original, space-age music and sound effects by Sight and Sound embrace the action with sometimes intriguing offworldly melodies.

Directed by Conrad Selvig, Space Pandas is well put together and enthusiastically performed. Its cartoon-level plot and characters make it primarily children's theater. Although Pandas is laced with scathing satire, somehow it's the cartoon that lingers.

The plot could not be more basic. Escaping from a tuna casserole dished up by a shrewish mom (Elizabeth Klaas in rollers, housecoat and fluffy slippers), 12-year-old Binky Rudich (Michael Lojkovic) and his cronies Bob the Sheep (Thomas J. Burks) and Vivian (Kris Ingram) hastily put the finishing touches on Binky's two-speed clock and spin off earth only to find themselves on Crestview, the fourth world of the Goolagong System, in a society remarkably similar to that depicted on Earth's network television every day of the week.

In this plastic world, Bob the Sheep is at an unexpected premium because the planet's glitzy ruler, George Topax (John Breyer sassily arrayed in electric orange, yellow and blue) wants to be the only one on Crestview to own a wool sweater. And there aren't any sheep on Crestview. Except Bob.

It's hard to tell whether Mamet set all this up in order to comment on the shallowness and mind-numbing effect of mass visual media or whether the satirical bits are mere asides. But Joyce Strolle, as a stunningly vacuous TV interviewer decked out like Circe, and as an ubiquitous voice-over throughout the show, turns in a slick performance that delivers a solid kick to the transistorized solar plexus of household TV and the mentality that cottons to it.

As Edward Farpis, the famous but forgotten star of Crestview movies, Milton Hayes delivers another broadside, accomplishing with costume and the staggering fact of his mere presence the reversal of the whole plot. And John Breyer's crass and brash ruler, equal parts game show host, cardboard villain, and acquisition-conscious bully, speaks, I think, for itself.

The show's large and lively cast, in which Frederick P. Dodge's wonderfully dressed Jester is one bright spot among many, performs Pandas with good timing and gusto. In fact, the only production flaw is in the length of the set changes, which break the momentum of an otherwise fast-paced entertainment.

Although Space Pandas is not for everyone — it helps if you are a child of any age or a holdout from America's relentless media blitz — it's too bad so well produced a show had to fly by in just one weekend. So much for two-speed clocks.

Fast-paced realism in Hartnell's 'E/R'

HARTNELL COLLEGE'S Western Stage wraps up its winter season with E/R Emergency Room, a play with so many authors (eight) it seems fair to say it was written by committee. To stage E/R, director and scene designer Leo Paul Cortez has made use of the playing areas of both the college's main stage and studio theater, creating a third theater for this production.

The new space, except for audience seating on the set and closely surrounding the action, looks for all the world like the emergency rooms most of us would like to forget — institution green walls, too many clocks, that ubiquitous speckled tile from which blood stains are presumably most easily removed, and a number of shiny metal tools from which the flesh instinctively shrinks. As if this were not enough, the audience must enter the set to reach their seats, which are lit with the same uniform glaring intensity of the set itself. Suffice it to say you will feel yourself to be part of the action to an uncommon degree.

The action itself derives from the predictable assortment of types — a hallucinating yuppie, a drunken bum, a pair of street people who have injured each other fighting, a hysterical hypochondriac, and many more. Plus the genuine emergencies — an unconscious child, the obvious victim of child abuse; a man having a heart attack; a suicide attempt. Needless to say, the potential for both dramatic action and humor is built into such situations.

But into whose hands are these people placed? The staff of E/R both confirms and allays the deepest suspicions of the collective unconscious. For among their number are a callous, power-jockeying desk clerk (Jill Dorse) who makes a man with a broken jaw say his name twice and refuses to answer a question from an irate mother unless the woman will sit down, and a pretty young nurse (Trish Horsley) who hates a mess.

There's burned out, divorced Dr. Sheinfeld, brashly played by Terry Ward, who has lived through so many emergencies that only a broken date can upset him; and the inexperienced but overconfident Dr. Sherman, played with Kildarean sincerity by Scott Quintard, who thinks he can accomplish medical miracles single-handed. But there's also the all-business nurse, played to crisp perfection by Moray Koontz, who puts her patients before her ego every single time.

There are some wonderfully funny bits, not the least of which are Walter Boudreaux's businessman with an unusual emergency, Bonnie Phillips' irate mother, and William Reynolds' garrulous insomniac. Keith Underwood's tripping yuppie has some nice moments too. In fact, the very large cast does a uniformly fine job of sketching characters quickly and works quite smoothly together.

Director/scene designer Leo Paul Cortez has carefully orchestrated more than 30 characters in multiple, almost continuous action throughout E/R, no mean task all by itself.

Like the TV series it inspired, E/R just goes on until the shift ends. The rise and fall of its dramatic movement emerges from the material itself. By evening's end, the young doctor learns something about the limits of medical miracles and the veteran seems more likeable, but that's about it. E/R is a convincingly realistic evening, but not a deep one.

Dance concerts scheduled at college

Monterey Peninsula College presents its annual spring dance concert at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 18-19, in the college theater.

Fourteen dance pieces, ranging from jazz to modern dance to ballet, will be performed to music by such artists as Pink Floyd, Kate Bush, Bryan Adams and Sam Harris. Half of the dance pieces have been choreographed by MPC dance students.

Directing the concert are MPC dance instructors Walter White and Amy Boyle, whose dance and choreography talents will also be featured. Peninsula dancer and choreographer Janet Butler will also direct an improvisation piece.

Tickets to the concert are $4 for general admission and $3 for students and seniors. They may be purchased in advance at the MPC Physical Education Office or at the door.

Lecture focuses on past lives

On Thursday, April 17 at Sunset Center in Carmel, psychic Raye Allan and yoga instructor Phyllis Haffner will lecture on the subject of past lives — the concept of reincarnation, methods of accessing past-life memories and the purpose of doing so. A question-and-answer period will follow the presentation, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Bingham Room. Admission is free.

Allan and Haffner approach the question of accessing past lives from different angles, which they have brought together in the Activated Cellular Memory

(ACM) process and ACM Yoga.

According to Allan, "Many people still have unfinished business from their past lives, and this influences their present life."

In addition to teaching the physical postures and breathing techniques of Hatha Yoga, Phyllis Haffner works with progressive yoga relaxation in the ancient tradition of Samma Sambuddha Yoga, to help students access memories dating back to earliest moments of this life and past lives.

Series of golf classes begins at Rancho Canada

Swing into spring with group golf lessons. Both beginner and intermediate eight-week classes are being offered to adults at the Rancho Canada Golf Course under the co-sponsorship of the Monterey Parks and Recreation Department.

Beginning golfers will meet on Mondays; intermediate golfers will meet on Tuesdays. Meeting time choices are 4 to 5:30 p.m. or 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Instruction will be provided by Dian Murphy. The first of the two sessions begins April 21 and April 22. Pre-registration for the 12 hours of professional instruction is required and accepted on a first-come first-served basis at the Monterey Parks and Recreation administrative office, 546 Dutra St., Monterey. Class size is limited to 20 participants. The fee is $60.

Golf instructor Dian Murphy will offer instruction in the fundamentals of grip, stance and swing, aim and trajectory, approach shot/pitch and run, sand shot, putting, trouble shot, discussion of and proper fit of golf equipment and goal setting.

The intermediate class is for persons wanting to improve their golf game who have had previous formal golf lessons. Participants are to wear flat shoes or golf shoes. Clubs are provided if you do not have your own.

Take notice that a second session of eight-week golf group lessons will follow; the beginners class is set for June 23. The intermediate class is set for June 17. For more information, telephone the Monterey Parks and Recreation Department at 646-3866.

the Czar, proposed marriage to the teenager out of love or instead used her as a pawn in an attempt to extend Russia's territorial limits to the western shores of North America.

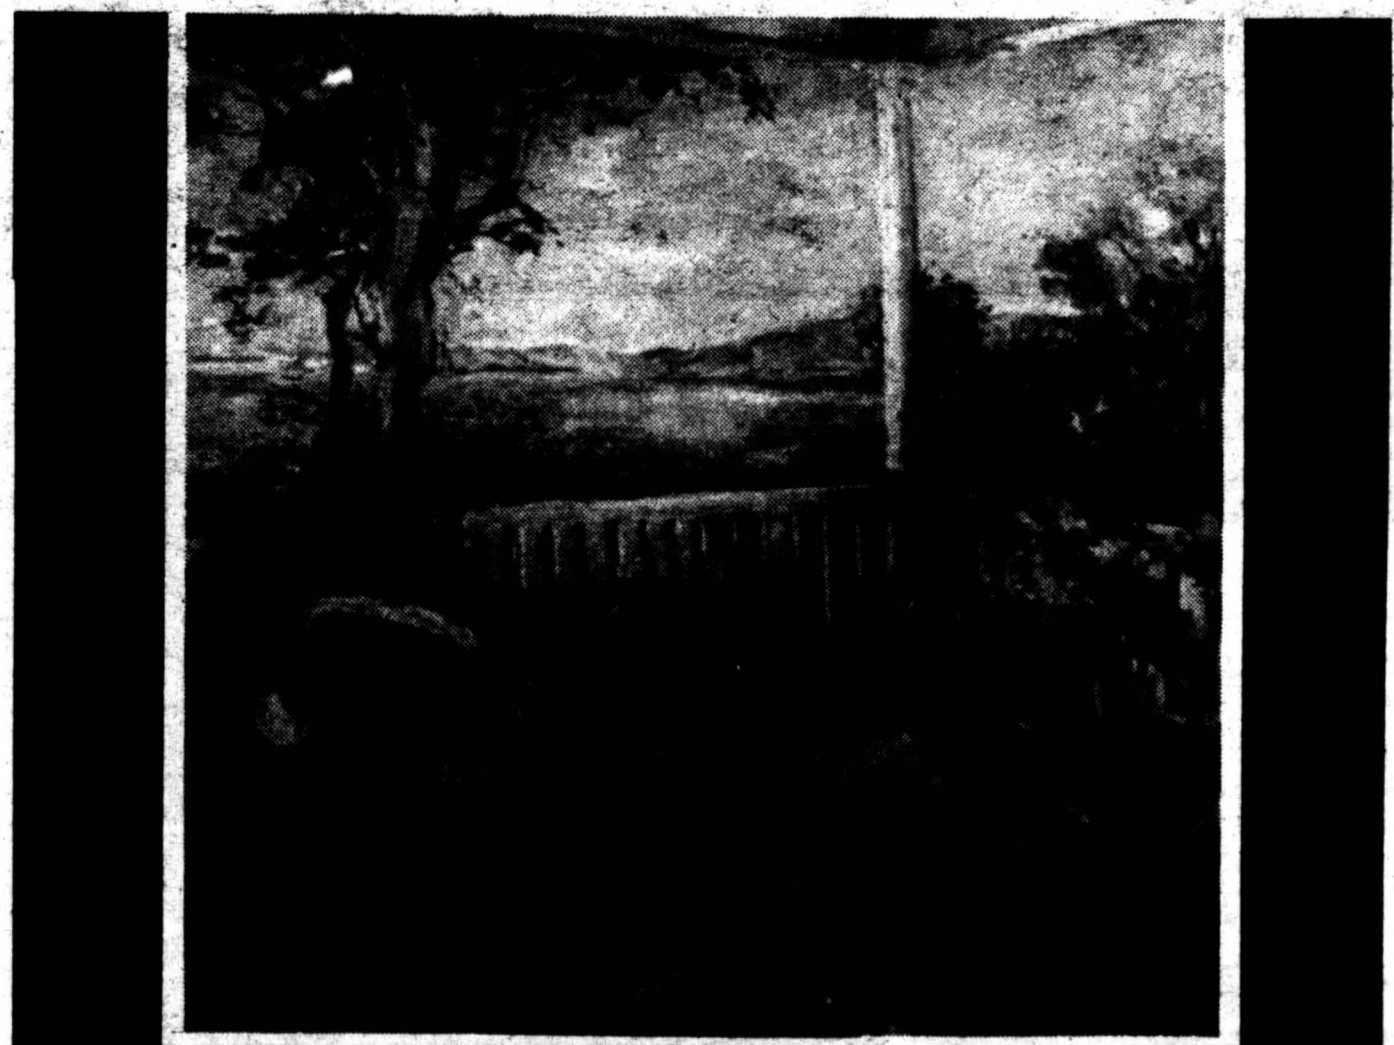

Moore is himself a native of San Diego. He graduated from Stanford University in 1932 and Stanford Law School in 1935, and practiced briefly in San Francisco before moving to Salinas in 1937.

After five and one-half years as assistant district attorney of Monterey County, Moore served in World War II as a legal officer in the U.S. Navy at Wright Field, Ohio and in the Philippines.

Although enamored of Early California history, Moore's interest in the Julian dynasty of ancient Rome prompted him to write a play, The Rise and Fall of Caligula. According to the playwright, it was the first work to be produced at the performing arts center at Hartnell College in Salinas, newly opened in 1974.

While intermingled with fiction, The Impostors of Monterey is also peppered with historic photos of the real-life people and places from which it takes its cue.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

A musical banquet, a premature debut

DO THE CHILDREN of the famous get breaks that ordinary mortals don't get? Of course. When it happens in banking, cabinetry or the mortuary business, we tend to take it for granted. When it happens in the performing arts, it often raises eyebrows. However, the tradition is just as old and respected as in other fields. There were multiple Couperins, Scarlattis, Bachs, to name only the most famous. Many of us remember the old song about being born in a trunk in Pocatello, Idaho. The Barrymore family. And a host of others.

Doors will open readily to these folks that may require some pounding by others. However, that really is the only break they get. They may find later that they must be considerably better than others to make the next step, in much the same way that minority groups in some fields have had to out-perform members of the dominant group.

And, after that, they must perform like anyone else to maintain their position. Liza Minelli's popularity has not been because she was Judy Garland's daughter (which didn't help her half-sister), it has been because a lot of people responded to her.

So Navah Perlman appeared on April 10, on the Bronson Concerts, less as herself than in her capacity as Izthak Perlman's daughter. Indeed, a local magazine headlined her appearance just that way. And so, the first door has been opened for Miss Perlman.

It proved to be a premature opening. Presenting a program that would have taxed the capabilities of a much more seasoned musician, she was never really in control, technically or musically. She is only 15; there is lots of time.

MIX AND MATCH chamber music groups are getting to be all the vogue. Last year, we heard Tashi; this year Music from Marlboro, the Cascade Soloists and now Philomusica. With a troupe of nine — string quartet, two horns, clarinet, piano and bass — they appeared at Sunset Theater on April 12 in a banquet of (mostly) dinner music.

The program opened with a Divertimento by Haydn for piano, violin, cello, bass and two horns. Haydn wrote many such occasional pieces, as did all his contemporaries. This one is of particular interest to Haydnophiles because of the importance of the keyboard part. Many of these pieces were outdoors music, played on portable instruments. An independent keyboard part fixes the group in one spot.

Although played on modern instruments, the piece survived well; it was properly sprightly. One might have liked more concession to galant style in the form of a somewhat straighter tone and more sharply outlined short phrases.

Three trios by Max Bruch, of violin concerto fame, were the novelty of the program. Scored for piano, viola and clarinet, they expand the literature for that very lovely combination considerably. They are pleasant trifles, very romantic. No. 7, D major, was surprising by being cute in ways one never would have expected from Bruch.

Mozart's Divertimento No. 17, D major, for two violins, viola, cello, bass and two horns, provided the second half of the program. In spite of its beauty — after all, this is Mozart — it suffers from the proscenium arch. It is very long, and was not intended for this kind of performance. It received a very good reading from the group, the lyrical theme and variations being especially lovely.

The only meat course, to strain the banquet image, was Alban Berg's difficult Adagio from the Chamber Concerto for piano, violin and 13 instruments, in a reduction by the composer for piano, clarinet and violin. Although Berg has the reputation of being the most lyrical of the Second Viennese School (Schoenberg and Webern are the others), that doesn't necessarily help in the understanding of his work. In some measure, this is because 12-tone composition is not inherently a lyrical style. Of necessity, it is angular and it lends itself better to contrapuntal than to harmonic treatment.

In general, the performance was all right, although it suffered from the willingness of the violinist to play third fiddle, as it were. She was often overshadowed by the other two. In any case, the piece is much more effective in its original version where the tone colors can play their part in the structure.

The audience was really quite attentive, even though one did not have a feeling of rapt attention. There is, perhaps, a future for the 20th century here (at least the first half of it). The most important thing is a willingness to listen, for, without that, it is not possible to acquire the knowledge necessary for considered judgments and informed opinions.

Incidentally, the Awards Competition of the Chamber Music Society is scheduled for Sat., May 3, starting at 1 p.m., at Sunset Theater. There is no better way to spend a Saturday afternoon — and it is free!

Contemporary jazz performed

The jazz bands of Monterey and Pacific Grove high schools will present a benefit concert titled "An Evening of Contemporary Jazz."

Admission will be by $3 donation. The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 17 at Pacific Grove Middle School. For information, call 375-1309.

'Night Music' to be cast

Auditions for the Stephen Sondheim musical, A Little Night Music, will take place on two consecutive weekends.

Gina Welch will direct the musical for The Wharf Theater. Performers should bring a prepared song. Audition times are 3 to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, April 19-20 and 26-27 at The Wharf Theater. For details, call 372-2882.

A STROLL TO THE SURF

Exceptional without exception — outstanding location, just a jaunt to Pt. Joe and Spanish Bay for a Mediterranean Contemporary residence. Open plan with spacious expanses, graceful curved arches and dramatic angles will delight the eye. Three bedrooms with three baths, a delightful kitchen with indirect lighting, pantry, Jennair and tile, a breakfast alcove; grand family room overlooks gardens; tiled dining room opens to a walled, secluded patio. Grounds are picturebook-perfect on 1/3 acre—a great value at $299,500.

CARMEL VALLEY GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB IN LOVE WITH "THE GOOD LIFE."

Expansive yet intimate; grand yet understated — a love affair with The Good Life is sure to befall all who view this smashing residence at the 9th tee of Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. From the edge-planked hardwood flooring, to the elegance of marble, to the warmth of woods and imported tile; no expense has been spared in craftsmanship and taste. The master suite with its secret-garden bath of marble is a marvel—the garden solarium welcomes each sunbeam. A balcony library overlooks a spectacular foyer, a hideaway den opens to two fairway expanses. Simply superb at $680,000.

THE CARMEL BLEND OFFERED BELOW APPRAISAL

A noted architect has captured an artful melange of traditional and contemporary in an ideal location — a serene lane, 6 blocks to downtown. Totally rebuilt, wood shingle exterior previews a warm interior of tile, abundant wood and cane cabinetry, thermopane windows and delightful wallpapers. Only the best in construction and amenities are featured in this 2 bedroom, 2 bath residence. Enjoy the formal dining room, or casual moments in the sunlit family room. Efficient country contemporary kitchen with greenhouse window overlooks patio with large brick BBQ. Previously sold for $255,000—now $239,500.

WATCH THE WAVES AT CARMEL POINT

Enjoy dramatic ocean and beach views from 3 sides of this stunning residence — master suite with sitting room and fireplace leads to solar heated pool and spa. Two additional bedrooms are beautifully decorated. An open floorplan "great room" with massive stone fireplace and hardwood invites ocean views. The owner, a noted chef and gourmet cookbook author, designed her own "working" kitchen. Style and flair, creative yet comfortable. $515,000.
